What About That War?
We're in the League Now.
Assorted Bad News, Some Good.
Surprise for Prohibition.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WHAT ABOUT the war in Asia? That is the important question for the world at large. The League of Nations asked us to come in. Every intelligent American knows what that means. It would mean taking the responsibility, paying bills.

Japan wanted us to stay out, but Japan is outvoted by the League, 13 to 1. The probability is that the United States will be dragged into this war, which the angels above can testify is no war of ours.

P. S.—Since that was written, poor old Uncle Sam has been pushed into the quarrel. Going in is easy; how will he come out?

THIS NATION and the League of Nations stood aloof, calm, unmoved, while millions of Chinese men, women and children, were being drowned in floods, starved to death, butchered by bandits and civil war.

We endured all that beautifully, with noble indifference.

Why must we be dragged into the thing, why does the business of Asia suddenly become OUR business, when war starts?

WHEN CONGRESS meets there will be much "queer" legislation proposed. No wonder the "best minds" that the Secretary of Agriculture describes as "the higher ups with cold feet" want to postpone the gathering of Congress as long as possible.

Senator Borah will come sailing in from Idaho, proposing to make of silver real money at the ratio of 14 to 1.

Heavy heads will shake when that is suggested.

AND THINK of Senator Norris, of Nebraska. He and his fellow progressives want the government to "recapture and control all public business, power companies, etc."

That's enough to make a good "best mind" crawl right into the tomb with Lenin, saying:

"Eventually; why not now? So, move over."

However, proposing is one thing, doing is another.

The United States OUGHT to have brains enough to manage some of its own affairs.

But if it couldn't manage its power companies and other public utilities any better than it managed that last war, or any better than it is now managing League of Nations matters, heaven protect us from public management for a while.

WE LIVE in a day of assorted bad news. Ireland resorts to a coercion bill in the Free State, giving power of death to military tribunals, in connection with political crimes. De Valera begs for internal peace. The coercion law would act unpleasantly.

Cardinal Macrory, in Dublin, asks prayers for peace, and the Pope has fixed a day, October 25, when he will appear in St. Peter's, to pray for peace between church and state in Spain, all the Spanish clergy joining him in supplication.

THERE IS ALSO some good news, and the best of it today is that Dr. Bruening German Chancellor, wins in the Reichstag and will continue at his post for six months longer.

The various forces opposed to the German republic have failed, for the time being, a fortunate thing for Germany.

TWO MORE THEATERS are bombed in Chicago, part of a labor war against the theater owners. Fifteen theaters have been bombed within two months, fortunately, without great damage. The plan, perhaps, was to warn owners, by frightening the public, cutting down receipts.

However, a system that risks the life of citizens, not responsible for labor troubles, ought not to be profitable in the long run.

BISHOP CANNON, Jr., has been indicted, under the corrupt practices act, in Washington, D. C., accused of failure to report a gift of $63,000 contributed to his fight against Alfred E. Smith for president. Mr. Smith will be interested in that news.

SINCERE PROHIBITIONISTS, working for "total abstinence, empty prisons and an end of crime," a few years ago, must be puzzled by today's crime statistics.

During the first eight months of this year, in New York state alone, 594 persons were killed, by shooting, cutting, stabbing and other methods. Property stolen in the eight months amounted to more than $9,000,000. And while the number of murders increased, the number of criminals arrested diminished. Modern crime is well financed.

INVESTIGATORS TELL the government that legalized beer would provide a government revenue of 300 millions, an underestimate.

Beer in England gives the government more than 400 million dollars a year. Not counting income tax from brewers, retailers, etc. Britain's population is less than half of ours, and not much more thirsty.

A beer tax here would bring in 600 millions a year. But it would grieve prohibitionists and annoy bootleggers. The latter will know how to prevent it.

NEW YORK'S BUDGET, to which 10 or 11 millions are casually added, as the grocer throws in an extra prune to

STUDENTS FIGHT 'EGG WAR'

Although their annual football battle was called off, Perry and Allegheny High School students met in a night street battle in Perrysville avenue near East street and besmeared the countenances of one another with vegetables and eggs. The bombardments lasted for nearly an hour and were not of sufficient proportions to merit the attention of police.

The football game was cancelled yesterday by the principals of the two schools when it was learned that paint had been used on the front of Perry High School to proclaim the game scheduled for yesterday afternoon. Allegheny students are blamed for painting the Perry school steps. In retaliation it was reported that Perry students left their classes yesterday and made a visit to Allegheny.

The "war" last night was on Perry territory and Allegheny students are reported to have invaded the upper Perrysville avenue district in several automobiles, from which they hurled vegetables at Perry youths on the street. After the second or third attack Perry students began to collect their own ammunition and returned the fire.

VOTE QUIZ INDICTS 14 MORE

SUSPECT TAKEN IN DUPING OF TWO JUDGES

Man Charged With Taking Vote Fraud Records by Ruse Seized in Canton, O.

Sought by Department of Justice operatives as a man who duped Judges James R. Macfarlane and Samuel H. Gardner into turning over vote fraud records to him when he posed as a Department of Justice attorney, Vernon R. Chumbley, of Nashville, was arrested in Canton, O., today by a city detective.

His arrest was made on a warrant sworn to by Edward Ferris, credit manager of the Fort Pitt Hotel, who charges Chumbley with passing a bad check while a guest there.

Ferris not only uncovered the duping of the judges but was directly responsible for Chumbley's arrest, aiding the city detectives in tracing him to Canton, where, police said, he was registered as R. Cullen.

SHAKEDOWN PLOT SEEN

The Department of Justice agents said they believed Chumbley obtained the court records for the purpose of "shaking down" foreigners involved in the vote fraud investigations.

According to city police, Chumbley went first to Judge Macfarlane, posing as a Department of Justice attorney, who wished to check on foreigners liable to deportation for election law violations.

Judge Macfarlane, the police said, turned over to him a long list of records and then sent him to Judge Gardner, who furnished him three books of court notes.

Credit Manager Ferris went to Chumbley's room to question him about a $50 check returned by the bank after the hotel had cashed it. Chumbley was gone, but the court records were there.

Ferris reported the matter to federal authorities and then, when Chumbley did not return, swore out a warrant charging him with attempting to "beat" a $10 hotel bill.

Chumbley, being brought back from Canton today, will face Alderman Thomas D. Jones Monday for a hearing on the hotel bill charge.

Federal operatives said that a charge of impersonating a government officer also is to be placed against him.

Clunk Shaping Jury Evidence in Schooley Probe

Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk was shaping up evidence today for submission to the grand jury next week in the investigation of the office of Roy D. Schooley, suspended city treasurer.

City Controller James P. Kerr, who ordered the audit of Schooley's transactions, conferred with Clunk in the latter's office today, going over details to be presented to the jury.

Possible broadening of the scope of the probe to other city departments was forecast with the return from Canada of District Attorney Andrew T. Park, expected tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the hunt continuued for Arthur G. Burgoyne, Jr., chief investigator for Schooley, who has not been seen at the City-County Building since October 3.

GRAND JURY INQUIRY

The grand jury will be finished with its routine work Tuesday or Wednesday, and ready to take up consideration of the election probe and the Schooley transactions, it was learned.

Schooley has been suspended from office by Mayor Charles H. Kline, pending the outcome of the probe into the alleged lack of security for a $125,000 deposit in the Franklin Savings and Trust Company.

Lack of security on the deposit is understood to be the principal point on which the grand jury will quiz witnesses. It must do

YOUTH WOUNDED BY POLICEMAN AS ROBBER

Officer Fires Into Window Of Butler Street Store, Routed Pair Captured

A youthful robber suspect was shot early today when, police say, he and a companion were detected in the act of looting a Butler street grocery store. The wounded man is Albert Stork, 21, no home. He is in West Penn Hospital, a bullet wound in the right thigh. His alleged companion, Edward Garland, 19, of 4009 Butler street, is being held by police.

Two sub-patrolmen, appointed to the force in February were walking adjoining beats in the Butler street district. They met at Thirty-sixth and Butler streets this morning and noticed someone moving in the store of M. Benko, at 3601 Butler street. A closer investigation revealed someone crawling behind a counter.

Patrolman Emanuel Mori, 31, of 445 Ella street, drew his revolver and fired through the window. He saw a man roll over. Patrolman Joseph Flora, 27, of 129 South Twenty-second street, ran to the rear of the building in time to see two figures emerge. The suspected pair fled in Mulberry way, one limping as he ran. They were captured by the two officers after a chase of two blocks.

Stork was taken to West Penn Hospital and Garland was lodged in Forty-third Street Police Station. Police say entrance to the store was gained through a rear cellar door. Benko, the owner of the store, said he was unable to tell whether anything had been stolen. He said that his store had been robbed two months ago and his cash register stolen.

Beaten by a robber who had hidden himself in a passageway, George Bayerlein, 31, of 619 Arlington avenue, a watchman in the Terminal Warehouse, South Third street, was knocked unconscious early today. As he fell to the floor he struck a packing case and suffered a deep laceration on the chin.

Oakland Flier Battling Storm Lands in Hayfield

After battling wind and rain in the air for nearly two hours, Emmett Williams, 27, of Elsinore apartments, Elsinore square, Oakland, last night landed his monoplane safely in a hayfield on the Washington pike, near Bridgeville, in a driving storm. He is a Western Union Telegraph Company engineer and an amateur flier.

Williams was caught in the fury of the storm as he was flying his plane from Bettis to Mayer Field, near Bridgeville. With his motor wide open, and nearly blinded by rain, Williams attempted to escape the storm that was tossing his craft.

An unidentified driver of a farm wagon, one of a throng that stood watching the imperiled aviator, ran into the field, waving Williams to land there.

The motor was roaring, and the crowd marveled as the plane swept across the highway and landed between two haystacks. Williams said he narrowly missed a house in the forced descent.

Japan Attacks U. S. Stand as 'Meddling'

League Action Held Effort to Involve America

TOKIO, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—While the War Department and Foreign Office staffs worked throughout a national holiday today, army authorities were quoted by the press as characterizing the attitude of the United States in the Manchurian situation as "extremely meddlesome."

Rengo news agency said the statement of army authorities was made after a meeting at which they voted to uphold Japan's stand.

Army authorities, according to the agency, contended that since the government repeatedly had stated the recent difficulties in Manchuria should be settled without the intervention of a third party "it is extremely meddlesome on America's part to concern herself with a serious issue arising from a region where Japan has special, peculiar relations. Such a step would only irritate the sensitive feelings of the Japanese people."

LEAGUE STAND RESENTED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—In the face of open resentment by the Japanese Minister of War, a representative of the United States is sitting at Geneva with the League of Nations Council.

The league's invitation to the United States to help untangle the Manchurian difficulties of China and Japan is described by Japanese Minister General Minami as "plainly an attempt to drag America into the affair."

In Tokio, he said, league interposition would be "little short of intervention" and would "not please Japan."

Julian Eltinge Wounded By Captured Swordfish

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Julian Eltinge won a battle with a 190-pound swordfish, but the marlin got in several rapier-like thrusts which caused the famed female impersonator to undergo an intestinal operation.

Details of the sea fight were disclosed today at the hospital where Eltinge was recovering, and Dr. Earl C. O'Donnell, a companion, was under treatment for an infected hand. James Jump, fisherman, received severe cuts on one hand.

The three were guests of Lazard Lippman aboard his racing yacht "Talaya" and went fishing in the schooner's tender off Point Vincente Wednesday. Eltinge got a strike. He played the catch an hour and three-quarters, finally bringing it alongside the tender.

The swordfish was not conquered, however. After it was in the boat it began to lash about with its bill. A side blow struck Eltinge. His companions received severe hand cuts.

The actor was operated on yesterday by Dr. O'Donnell, who said that, barring complications, Eltinge should be about in another week or so.

CANNON LIKELY TO FACE TRIAL DURING CONGRESS FEUD

BATTLE SEEN OVER BISHOP AND AIDES

Nye to Present Report of Probe Into Churchman's Anti-Smith Campaign

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., under indictment with Miss Ada L. Burroughs for alleged violation of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, may be tried early in January while Congress is deulged in debate over his anti-Smith campaign of 1928, it appeared today.

With arraignment of the pair expected within 10 days, Assistant District Attorney John J. Wilson in charge of the grand jury inquiry indicated they probably would be tried shortly after Christmas.

Congressional fireworks may explode both in Senate and House on the eve of the trial. The Nye committee will open a fight in the Senate when it reports that Miss Burroughs and the Rev. J. Sidney Peters, also a Cannon aide, refused to testify before the committee.

William Tyler Page, clerk of the House, introduced a new note when he said today he would not honor a subpoena to produce records for the trial unless ordered to do so by the House.

Although he presented the campaign expense reports of the anti-Smith Democrats headed by Bishop Cannon to the grand jury, Page said he would not go so far in the trial.

Bishop Cannon, assailing the special Senate committee which unearthed the failure of his campaign organization to file complete reports of contributions with the Clerk of the House, prepared for the fight of his life.

He will come to Washington to confer with his chief counsel, Colbert H. McNeill. The first move is expected to be a motion to quash the indictment or a demurrer.

DEFENSE PLANNED

McNeill prepared to assail constitutionality of the corrupt practices act on the ground that Congress cannot legislate on the election of presidential and vice president electors. These, he claims, are state officers.

The constitutional question, which has never been raised in a criminal trial under the Corrupt Practices Act, is expected ultimately to reach the Supreme Court.

BURGOYNE HUNTED

It was still hoped that Special Investigator Burgoyne would be on hand to tell what bonds he showed to City Controller James P. Kerr as security for the $125,000 deposit, and where those "mystery bonds" are, now. Search for them has failed. County detectives, armed with subpenas, have been seeking Burgoyne for three days, without avail.

Following the suspension of Schooley, Thursday, fear was felt that funds of the Board of Education, of which he is also treasurer, would be tied up pending outcome of the probe. Attorney J. Rodgers McCreery, solicitor for the board, however, says that Schooley's office with the board is unaffected by the Kline suspension of the Treasurer.

"MYSTERY BOND" SEARCH

Cashier Robert Torrence, of the Treasurer's office, and G. H. Goodman, in charge of Price Waterhouse & Co.'s audit of the office for Kerr, visited a number of banks yesterday. It was understood they were checking all securities posted for city deposits and keeping close watch for the "mystery bonds."

Thirty-four extra employes of the Treasurer's office were dismissed by Kline when he took possession of the office. Chief Clerk Richard W. Thompson was then appointed temporary head of the department, pending outcome of the investigation.

Strikes His Mother In Court, Jailed

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Told by Judge Eugene Bonniwell that he should be flashed at the whipping post, Cornelius O'Callahan, accused of striking his mother in the face in court, replied:

"I'd like to see you do it."

He was sentenced to six months in the county prison for contempt of court and was held in $1,000 bail on a charge of assault and battery. His mother, Nora, 68, sought support from him and another son, John. The court ordered each son to pay $3 weekly. O'Callahan was alleged to have struck his mother after the order had been made.

Nearly 100 residents of the Sixth Ward appeared before the Registration Commissioners last night when hearings on individual cases of personal registration in the city wards for the recent primary were conducted. Chairman J. K. Morrow heard the testimony which concerned forged orders for tax receipts.

Most of those who testified said that the written order for his tax receipt did not bear his signature.

Almost all the receipts were issued to Edward Sullivan, who was unknown to most of those who appeared. Several persons said they had paid for their receipts, but a majority said the paper had been left at their home during their absence or that some acquaintance had handed it to them gratis.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The capital's exodus of national figures for Yorktown will be complete when President Hoover boards the U. S. S. Arkansas at Annapolis this afternoon and cruises down to the historic Virginia town over a water route which partly parallels that taken by the French fleet 150 years ago, in bringing ultimate victory to George Washington and the Continental Army.

Flanking him will be Marshal Henri Petain, "saviour of Verdun;" Gen. John J. Pershing, the governors of the states which were the 13 original colonies, members of the cabinet and a host of other notables.

YORKTOWN, Va., Oct. 17.—(INS.)—The sun flashed out of the broad sweep of the York River here today and called to action the illustrious sons of France, England and America, the present governors of the 13 original states or their representatives, who awoke to continue their part in the celebration of the one hundred fiftieth anniversary celebration of the battle which made the colonies free.

Lord Cornwallis, descendant of the English earl, found himself most popular overnight, following his speech yesterday at the dedication of a memorial to his ill-fated ancestor. He declared:

"War is behind, peace is in front, we hope for ever more."

Walker Aide in Mexico With Bride, Bans Quiz

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 17.—(INS.)—Russell T. Sherwood, wanted for questioning by a New York state legislative committee concerning his activities as financial agent for Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, resisted all efforts today to question him concerning his connections with Walker or to state whether he would respond to a subpena issued by the committee. He said:

"I am here on a honeymoon, and outside of that, have no particular reason for remaining away from New York. I don't know how long we will remain here, but my wife and myself like the scenery, and there are still a lot of things we want to see."

Asked directly if he had heard from the New York investigating committee, or if he was Mayor Walker's business agent, as stated during the New York inquiry, Sherwood expressed annoyance at the efforts to draw him out, despite his repeated statements that he had nothing to say.

make the pound, reveals interesting facts.

For instance, the budget gives to schools $97,706,665, to police $62,917,728. Hospitals get $20,106,390.

Ninety-seven millions to fight ignorance, 83 millions to fight crime and disease. Eventually, education, if it is the right kind, will conquer crime and disease, although we shan't live to see it.

Fortunately, diseases do not bribe the doctors, which explains why hospitals need only 20 millions.

Jailed Youth Tries Hanging 3 Times; 'Condition Good'

Louis Anderson, 17, of 3027 Zephyr street, recovered from what police said was his third attempt to end his life last night in his cell in Central Station, shortly after his arrest on a suspicious person charge, was discharged in Morals Court today.

His moaning brought Acting Sergt. Thomas Scanlon and Turnkey John Hooper to Anderson's cell twice, and the officers found him hanging from a cell bar by his belt. Uninjured, the prisoner was allowed to remain in his cell.

Several minutes later more cries brought Hooper to the cell, and Anderson was found dangling from a rope he had fashioned by tearing his handkerchief into strips.

Anderson, accused of taking a blanket and book from the auto of E. Ogden Thompson, 133 Gordon street, admitted the charge. Thompson asked for the discharge of the boy, which Magistrate Thomas D. Jones granted.

Aged Victim Refuses to Reveal Identity After Suicide Attempt Fails

Rescued from the Monongahela River, where she is said to have attempted to end her life, a 70-year-old woman, confined to the Homeopathic Hospital, today continued to refuse to reveal her identity. Hospital attaches say the woman has developed pneumonia and that her condition is critical.

The woman waded into the river near Brown's Bridge last night. She was rescued by Andrew Rosser, 34, of 309 Nineteenth avenue, Homestead, who, waist deep in water, struggled with the woman and brought her to shore. Deep mud and slime endangered the life of the man as he saved the woman.

Rosser, a World War veteran and an unemployed carpenter, was standing on the bridge with his brother, William, when he noticed the woman wading out into the river. Caught in the mud, she began to sink. Telling his brother to call the police, Andrew rushed to the bank, removed his shoes, and waded in after the woman. Unable to swim, he was soon caught in the mire himself, but succeeded in bringing the woman to shore.

He said:

"The woman cried out that she wanted to die, but we couldn't stand there and let her drown. I ruined my best suit of clothes, but I'm glad the woman is safe."

SEIZED IN TAXI WAR BURNINGS

Wanted by police in connection with the burning of an automobile in Marchand street several days ago, John Tait, 32, of 629 Chester avenue, North Side, was arrested early today. Patrolman Michael Welsh, who arrested Tait at North avenue and Federal street, turned him over to police at the East End Station.

Raymond Peck, a striking cab driver, whose machine was burned, testified he had seen Tait running from the blazing car. The accused, identified as an employe of the Parmelee Transportation Company, taxicab operators, denied the charge, saying:

"They (meaning the striking cab drivers) couldn't make the front page any more so they started on me. They accused me of throwing gas bombs at the cab drivers' meetings. I'm going to sue Peck for conspiracy."

Tait was held for investigation by detectives of the bomb and gas squad.

Police say that Tait is a former taxicab driver, and during the first cab strike, a year ago, organized the back-to-work committee. In the last few weeks three or four union drivers, now on strike, have reported their automobiles burned.

CAPONE AWAITS DECISION IN TAX TRIAL

Liberty or Possible 32-Year Term in Store For Al As Case Approaches Jury

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Al Capone, symbolic of gangland power in America, today stood at the crossroads of his career.

By nightfall a federal jury is expected to inform him of its verdict in his celebrated legal battle with the United States government over his failure to pay his income taxes.

A "Not guilty" verdict will mean liberty for Capone.

"Guilty" may result in the court dealing out the maximum punishment of 32 years in prison and a fine of $80,000. If sentenced to serve the maximum term, Capone would remain in jail until he is 65 years old. He is now 33.

In the event he is found guilty and heavily sentenced, it is a foregone conclusion that the defense will appeal the verdict to the United States Supreme Court.

The curtain will ring down today on the courtroom drama that is "the case of the United States government versus Alfonse Capone." A little more oratory, the judge's charge to the jury—then the verdict.

Capone's counsel, Michael Ahern and Albert Fink, in their impassioned closing addresses to the jury, argued the weakness of the income tax laws and contended the government during the trial failed to produce a scintilla of evidence that the defendant wilfully attempted to beat the government out of an admitted taxable income of $266,000 over a four-year period, as charged. On the contrary, they contended, Capone tried to "settle up."

PLAN POWERS THEATER TRIAL

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 17.—(AP.)—The Harrison County Court has under consideration a plan to rent a theater for the trial of Harry F. Powers, charged with the slaying of two women and three children.

The county is without a courthouse due to the old structure having been torn down to make way for a new building, now being erected.

The manager of a theater has offered his place for a rental of $500 a week, and the court will act Monday on the proposition. The theater seats 1,250 persons.

The County Court now uses the postoffice building for its sessions, but Postmaster Lucius Hoge has objected to the Powers trial being held there because the crowds may interfere with postal workers.

Powers will go to trial late in November or early in December.

The Mellon National Bank, with $2,900 deposits, The Union Trust Company, with $1,400, and the Union Savings Bank, with $800, were named as parties.

Hosts Forget to Invite Butler to His Banquet

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—(INS.)—How warring factions forgot to invite the guest of honor to a banquet which had been arranged in his honor, is disclosed here. The guest was none other than Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler.

Unaware that a banquet had been arranged to honor him, Gen. Butler retired to his hotel room at Fresno, Cal., and put a "do not disturb" sign on his room door.

Meanwhile a wrangle was going on among his hosts, one faction of which refused to attend the banquet on the ground that the marine general had injured the service by "indiscreet remarks and acts."

The other faction, however, gathered at the festive board and finally remembered that Gen. Butler had not been invited. A messenger was sent to the hotel and returned with the information that a sign on the general's door indicated the noted marine desired to sleep, so the "Butler banquet" was held without the general.

BISHOP BOYLE SETS DAY OF PRAYER FOR NEEDY

ENTIRE DIOCESE URGED TO HOLD SERVICES

Sunday, October 25 Set Apart for Observance; Letter Sent to Pastors

The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Pittsburgh, today designated Sunday, October 25, as a day of prayer for deliverance from the "threat of peril and tragedy," and for divine assistance for the poor and needy.

Bishop Boyle, in his letter to pastors and members of the Catholic churches in the 10 counties comprising the Pittsburgh diocese, wrote:

Bishop Boyle

"In these days of dread and anxiety it is not amiss, perhaps, to remind men of their dependence upon Divine Providence and of the Christian teaching that Almighty God governs the world and is the Ruler of men and of their temporal and spiritual affairs. Not economics and not politics, but the spirit of God will lay hold upon life and restore to men confidence and human comfort.

"The Feast of Christ the King, instituted by the Holy See when all the world was enormously satisfied with itself, comes now like a healing balm.

"I request special observance of the Feast of Christ the King, Sunday, October 25.

"I ask priests to urge all their people to visit the church during the day and to join the procession in the evening, imploring Almighty God that we be freed from the threat of peril and tragedy and from the great needs which afflict us. I urge all the people to implore the divine assistance for the poor and needy, and for a measure of content and tranquility for us all."

PLAN SERMONS FOR BUSINESS MEN, WOMEN

Dr. Kerr to Open Series Dealing With Depression; Talks Based on Real Life

The Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Amberson avenue and Westminster place, has prepared a series of sermons for business men and women, which will be presented at the morning service.

His subject tomorrow will be "The Man Who Invested His Money in a Time of Depression."

Commenting on the series, Dr. Kerr said:

"These are days when men and women in business are bewildered and distressed. For such days the church has a positive message. It is with this conviction that this series of sermons has been presented. They are based on real life as men in similar emergencies in the past have found in God the answer to their need."

At the vesper service, Dr. Kerr will speak on "Are Christians Different?"

PLAN SERVICE FOR HOMELESS

A special program for the homeless men at the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, Duquesne way, will be held tomorrow night. The Sunday evening services will be continued through the fall and winter months, and a different speaker will be engaged for each service, according to H. W. Shepard, secretary.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Allegheny County will sponsor a social Monday night in the chapel of the association.

Mrs. J. E. Sickler, of Scranton, was announced at this meeting as the editor of the Messenger, the official organ of the federation, and the policies of the federation under the Hamilton administration were discussed at length, but no announcement was made.

Mrs. Joseph Stein, New Kensington, was appointed to have charge of the junior activities in the state.

An invitation from the Philadelphia federation to entertain the state body at its 1932 meeting, was accepted at a meeting of the officers.

Trinity Cathedral Dean Addresses Sheraden Club

The art of living is simply getting along with other people, Dean Nathaniel Rue High-Moor, of Trinity Cathedral, told the Sheraden Woman's Club yesterday. Personalities are like icebergs, he said, as only one-eighth of each is visible, seven-eighths being submerged in the subconscious. The speaker likened people to a box of chocolates, saying all are alike on the outside, but everyone is different inside and the only way one can reasonably expect to get along with another is through understanding friendship. The dean gave as his definition of love "a sincere, intelligent passion to create and sustain the highest type of life."

Dorothy Ryan Nesbit offered piano solos and musical monologues and Mrs. W. B. Hershberger, junior president, reported the State Federation convention.

Miss Catherine Norton's administration as head of the Oakland Women's Club had an auspicious beginning yesterday at the president's day reception in the Hotel Schenley. More than 150 women attended, among the guests being representatives from other clubs. Mrs. Thomas J. Carroll presented the program, which was an especially enjoyable one, by Mrs. Edward P. Riehl, soprano; Miss Marie Sybert, contralto; Miss Dorothy Stobbe, violin; Mrs. Norval R. Daugherty, reader, and the two accompanists, Miss Alberta Yeaglin, for the singers, and Miss Katherine Rodgers, for the violinist.

Miss Emma Daugherty, who was recording secretary when the club was organized, and who is Miss Norton's closest friend, read the minutes of the organization meeting, held in 1913.

During the tea hour Mrs. W. F. Webb and Mrs. J. W. Frey presided at the tea table, where a gorgeous mound of autumn leaves and huge yellow chrysanthemums formed the centerpiece. Mrs. B. C. Tatum and her social committee were in charge of this part of the afternoon's activities.

STYLISTS PRESENT COLORFUL FASHIONS FOR THE FORTUNATE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Trust the fashion designers to take time by the forelock and work ahead. During the summer they toil over fur-trimmed garments that will add new zest to the autumn and winter seasons. And during the autumn they are hard at work plotting out grand things for those fortunate enough to trek south or go on cruises to the lovely West Indies or the glamorous Mediterranean. And so even now that the new showings are done with, designers are already showing things for winter pilgrims to the sun, who want to be ultra-smart on their trips to southern climes. It is all just a little bewildering for the onlooker. We trust that the designers do not feel too mixed up about things.

* * *

JUST TO SHOW you what is going to be the last word on the Southbound boats this winter, we are sending you an advance sketch of a necklace, bracelet and large hankie put out by the maison Martial et Armand. These accessories have a grand nautical flavor about them and should be a tonic to even the landlubber. On a thin gold chain, small flags representing either the nautical code or the pennants of various yacht clubs are done in colorful enamels and strung at even spaces. The large crepe de chine hankie is also salty, but not with tears, we hope.

Reina Velez Joins Josephine And Lupe as Emoter In Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 17.

Those Velez girls are all going into the movies.

First Lupe, then Josephine and now Reina, the youngest, have succumbed to the lure of the talkies. Reina, who is 19 years old, and as quiet as Lupe is boisterous, plays a native girl in Helen Twelvetree's picture, "The Second Shot." It is a part originally intended for Dorothy Burgess.

Unfortunately Reina doesn't speak English, so her career will be limited for the present. She will get by with a few words and with pantomime in her current role.

Lupe Velez

Back in Mexico Reina had quite a bit of stage experience.

In a prankish moment, El Brendel sent a St. Louis friend one of those postcards which have two inches of fish-line pasted on the front and a legend above "Just a line from Hollywood."

Yesterday he received by express, $4.10 charges collect, six feet of hemp to which was wired a tag reading "Just a rope from St. Louis."

LATEST GOSSIP

Mary Nolan opened a gown shop in Hollywood last night. Of course, there was the usual battery of arc-lights without which no Hollywood opening of any kind is complete. Mervyn Leroy was 23 years old yesterday, and threw himself a party at his apartment. Loretta Young was principal guest, as far as Merv was concerned. Maurice Chevalier intrigues Hollywood Beau Brummels with his new gray and blue silk shirts with bow ties of the same material. Bebe Daniels much improved, is up and around again. She will not make a picture, however, until after the first of the year. On doctor's orders. Junior Laemmle has gone away for a two weeks' rest.

GABLE'S ESCAPE

A little-known fact about Clark Gable is that he almost was killed in that premature dynamite explosion during the filming of "The Painted Desert" a year ago.

You may recall that Director Howard Higgins and several members of the troupe were seriously injured.

Gable, then an unknown, was playing a heavy in the picture. When the explosion occurred, he was standing with Bill Boyd about 200 yards away.

He describes the next few minutes:

"All of a sudden, we heard small rocks whistling through the air around and above us. They were coming too fast to be seen. I made a dive behind a sand-bank, but Bill shouted to jump up. Just as I did so, I get a glimpse of a descending mass of rock. Then came a heavy thud, as it buried itself in the sand-bank beside us. After a few more small rocks and a cloud of dust, the whole thing was over."

Rockne Spirit In Stanley Picture

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Spirit of Notre Dame is in the Stanley—in the form of a fine motion picture, a picture essentially for those who get a kick out of football—and who doesn't? It is a good picture to see. It is a picture to amuse you. It is a picture to "buck you up." It is an excellent demonstration of the benefit of that psychological factor that used to be known as esprit de corps but is now called teamwork. It has action galore, comedy aplenty and punch above all.

But girls, and we assure you it is no drawback—it has no romance, no sheiks, no problems of the heart.

DEDICATED TO ROCKNE

Dedicated to the late Knute Rockne, who became as much a national hero as coach of Notre Dame as all of the great football players developed there, it catches the infectious urge of the man, transfers it to the screen, and from screen to audience. Watching it one becomes a Notre Dame partisan, a fan in the stadium rooting for "Bucky" O'Brien, Jim Stewart and "Truck" McCall, fictional characters, of the Notre Dame football team who symbolize all of the noted pigskin warriors of the Indiana university.

However, it is not these three, nor even the great "Four Horsemen," Don Miller, Jim Crowley, Harry Stuhldreher and Elmer Layden, the latter now coach at Duquesne, who dominate the picture. J. Farrell McDonald does that.

The "cast" lists him merely as The Coach, but the anonymity is only a gesture, for we know he represents Knute Rockne and we see it illustrated splendidly in the manner in which the driving impulse, the determination to do the utmost, is registered in the development of an intriguing story that has only one "soft" spot, a "sob" sequence. In short, "The Spirit of Notre Dame" is the spirit of Rockne, living vividly again in the flesh of J. Farrell McDonald.

Naturally, interest of those who are yet to see the film will be centered in the famous "Four Horsemen," and in Frank Carideo—"pronounce it 'Cari-day-o,' coach"—who play themselves in the picture, but they will be just old grads when the earlier sequences are reeled off.

THREE FINE CHAPS

After that the fan will readily believe that Lew Ayres, William Bakewell and Andy Devine, in the principal youthful roles, are not actors but real students, carrying on the traditions of honor and square-shooting and mutual assistance that we all admire.

It is just the little lapse in these traditions, however, that "makes" the picture. It is the thing that makes it human and shows us that our gods of the gridiron have feelings and and failings like the rest of us. It provides the "drama" of the theme, which, otherwise, is light and casual, an actual reflection of the days on the campus and in the dormitory and at the junior prom at any university, days that bring laughs and sighs when they are recalled in memory by chinning groups of old grads the world over.

The very slight gesture to romance in the picture calls for the appearance of a pretty lass, Peggy, who is played by Sally Blane.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Sir James M. Barrie, whose fay gift in writing has been described as fantastic, whimsical, elusive, let his fancy play on nothing more fanciful than the accident of birth in "The Admirable Crichton," which comes Monday to the Nixon. A shipwreck and rescue emphasize the importance of chance that fixes one's state in life, and Barrie's skill makes it interesting. Walter Hampden and Fay Bainter will have the leading roles. Wednesday and Saturday matinees are on the sched.

* * *

Small Timer says it would be all right with him if blondes preferred gentlemen exclusively.

* * *

The book of "Meet My Sister," musical comedy coming Monday to the Alvin, was taken from the Hungarian by Harry Wagstaff Gribble, one of our most adept adapters. It tells the romance of a modest young prof. and a rich young and beyootiful countess. The nerve of these young upstarts! Yet, what would playwrights do without them? The cast is headed by Nancy McCord, of the exclusive Long Island McCords, and Walter Slezak, scion of the Austrian Slezaks. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday? You said it!

* * *

Small Timer says a lot of market plungers who once wondered what to use their money for are now puzzled about what to use for money.

* * *

Another cinematic week begins today in the Harris, where the feature picture is "Riders of the Purple Sage," with George O'Brien prominent among the hossmen.

* * *

Small Timer says another guy who is doing crooked work in the heavy dough line is the pretzel bender.

Lennox Robinson, playwright and director of the Abbey Theater Irish Players of Dublin, will lecture Wednesday evening in Carnegie Hall on the Irish theater and Irish drama. There will be no admission charge. The Irish Players will present six plays here in five days, opening with "The Playboy of the Western World," in the Twentieth Century Club, Monday, November 2.

Native Girl

Reri, a native of a South Sea island, is featured in "Tabu," film coming to the Davis Monday as an added attraction to Bebe Daniels' "Honor of the Family."

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

All for a Pal

GEORGE IS a Wall street man. There aren't as many around these days as there once were, but a few of them are still holding on very nicely. George is one of the few. He has a decidedly decent income, enjoys his cocktail as well as the broker next door, looks fine in evening clothes and is generally a rather happy guy.

Our friend had been married eight years. When the ceremony took place, it was one of those weddings that had the society reporters very much on the job. The photographers carried plenty of extra plates and the society gossip columns predicted great things for the charming couple. Which is exactly what happened—until George began to stray.

He wasn't a very bad strayer. That is to say, he didn't have more than one new love every year. That, I suppose, is not a very exciting record these days.

The most pleasing thing that George did was to return to his wife after each affair. And what a beautiful return it was. He would meet her in their living room—and she would look at him.

"Well," she would say coldly, "what have you to say for yourself this time?"

Whereupon George would go into the tear act. So help me Winchell, he give her the real, old-fashioned, he-man tears.

"Ethel," he would cry, "I have been a fool. I am weak. I'm not fit to kiss the ground you walk on. On my knees, I beg your forgiveness. I made a terrible mistake in going with that other woman. It's you I love, dearest, and nobody else in the world."

I don't know how accurate I am in reporting George's hectic speeches on these occasions, but I do know that my heart is in the right place. Maybe his lingo wasn't as flowery, but it was certainly along similar lines. And, believe it or not, it worked!

Yes, sir. All in all, the wife forgave her husband six times during the eight years that they were married. Sometimes, of course, it took her a little longer—and, by the same token, George had to turn on the tears a little harder. But in the end, virtue always triumphed. Or maybe it was sin. Depends on the way you look at it.

On the last occasion, however, Mrs. George grew just a trifle weary.

"George," she asserted, "you are doing this to me for the last time. I'm tired of being pointed out as a fool by women who think I'm crazy to go on living with you. I've always forgiven you because I've loved you dearly. I did'nt want to lose you, regardless of the price.

"You may not sense it, George, but there's a limit even to the things that I can stand. I am giving you your last chance. You'll either change your ways—or we're through. I mean every word I say. And if you want my oath, I give it to you now."

George was the last word in pictures of downcast husbands.

"Dearest," he said, "I give you my word of honor that I'm through with other women from this moment on. If I ever do another wrong thing, I want you to divorce me. With thought of that as a punishment, I know I can do no wrong.

"I'm going to be decent, Ethel. Because I love you."

Strangely enough, George meant every word he said. And, to make the strangeness a little more complete, he actually kept his word.

Some six months later, George and his wife were sitting in the Casino, Central Park. It had been six months of happiness for both of them—in spite of the fact that George was still on Wall street. They were always together now, and George was so attentive that no one would ever dream Ethel was his wife. Everything was working out in splendid fashion.

As George sat toying with his menu, he suddenly smiled. For, walking through the door were two Wall street boys whom he knew intimately. With them, although they were both married, were two girls whom George had never seen before.

George didn't rise and extend a cordial greeting with his friends. There was a slight gesture of recognition—but no more. George knew the racket. He'd been through it plenty of times himself.

Time went on. The two Wall street boys were dining peacefully with their blonde companions. Everything seemed to be going smoothly—but it was only the calm before the tornado. Into the picture stepped the wife of one of the men. And on her face was a look that would chill the blood of any erring husband.

George leaped to his feet to warn the unsuspecting husband. As he did so, the other man saw her. He jumped from his chair, dug his hand in his pocket and handed George a slip of paper.

"Keep it for me, George," he breathed. "It's the name and address of the girl I'm with. Here comes the bride and there's going to be a swell scene. The girls will probably blow—and I don't want to lose track of mine. Keep it for me. Thanks, George. Call you tomorrow."

George placed the slip in his pocket and returned to his table. His wife looked at him with arched eyebrows.

"Just one of the boys getting caught," murmured George. "You know how it is."

His wife nodded grimly. Indeed she did know how it was. She turned around to watch the ensuing scene. Evidently she had not seen the friend hand George the slip of paper.

The scene wasn't so much after all. The two girls left. The wife sat down and talked vigorously. Finally the three left together. Not a real blow struck. Too bad.

The following evening when George returned to his home his wife didn't waste any time at all. She handed him the little note that had been slipped to him the previous night.

"I found it, George," she stated quietly, "and you know what it means. I just want you to know that I'm suing you for divorce immediately."

George attempted to stammer his innocence.

"My friend last night," he cried. "He gave me that in the Casino. Don't you—"

His reply was a laugh. And what a nasty laugh!

"If you want me to refresh your memory, my dear man," she interrupted swiftly, "there's a note on this slip of paper in addition to the name and address. 'I think the world of you, honey boy,' it says. 'Don't forget to call.' Honey boy, eh?

"I told you last time, George, that your next offense would be your last. I meant what I said. Don't tell me you'll call some friend and have him prove you held the note for him. With you cheats, one is as bad as the next.

"We're through, George."

Today, George is broken-hearted. His wife divorced him in Reno. He swears fervently that he'll never help another pal. But, he points out, isn't it all just like a woman? Six times, when he was wrong, she forgave him. And when he did nothing, she divorced him!

Desert Still Is Full of Thrills

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Hecht & McArthur, dealers in thrills and wild adventure, have unloaded a large supply of their best stock at the Penn Theater and called it "The Unholy Garden." There is the Desert, with lots of sand; there are half a dozen desperate criminals, also with lots of sand; there is an old blind man with a lovely daughter and several million francs hidden away where nobody but Ronald Colman can find 'em.

George Seibel

Ronald also is a desperate criminal, but not so wicked that he will deprive the lovely daughter of her millions, because Fay Wray, who is the aforesaid lovely daughter, loves him as only a picture heroine can love.

The half dozen villains do their worst, aided and abetted by Estelle Taylor as a sinuous vamp. She keeps the key of her motor-car under her pillow, and so Ronald can help Fay to escape, after Tully Marshall has been shot while defending the millions.

Blood and gasoline will bring any desert romance to a climax, as Sabatini and Wren have proved.

This is a very nice desert, with an ancient stronghold designed by Willy Pogany. And Ronald Colman certainly is a gallant hero, Fay Wray a lovely heroine, Estelle Taylor an alluring siren, and Tully Marshall very dramatic as the blind man.

You sit on the edge of your seat while all this is going on, realizing that Africa is as hot a place as Chicago. For the firm of Hecht & McArthur have a fine assortment of thrills warranted to stir your blood and tickle your spine.

The short comedy, "Skip the Maloo," is a primitive exhibition of horseplay and pie-throwing engineered by Hal Roach.

Knute Rockne is also there, telling how to play football in slow motion pictures.

Sheridan Square Offers 'Street Scene'

"Street Scene," picturization of Elmer Rice's prize-winning drama, opened a week's engagement in the Sheridan Square yesterday. This film was widely heralded by the critics on a recent downtown showing. Sylvia Sidney and William Collier, Jr., are prominent in the cast.

Orient Arms In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

With China and Japan seemingly on the verge of war, Hearst Metrotone News, in the current issue, showing in the Penn and other theaters presents exclusive pictures of troop trains carrying men, horses, guns and supplies on their way to Manchuria, territory that is inundated by floods, with many thousands dead and other hundreds of thousands homeless and starving.

Pictures from Japan show Nippon's well-drilled troops in reviews as they pass before their generals on their way to the front. The Globe Trotter explains what it is all about.

H. G. Wells, famous English author, arrives in New York on a visit to America and tells how the world's ills may be remedied. He believes that disaster can ultimately be averted.

The giant dirigible, Los Angeles, is shown permitting Navy pilots of airplanes to hook their ships onto it while both are flying at full speed. The big airship first skirts over New York City's towers and then while 4,000 feet above the ocean a plane comes along and attaches itself to the dirigible's hull.

A hundred elephants parading through the streets of Kandy, Ceylon, with thousands of natives indulging in a devil dance, is part of a most unusual pageant intended to drive away all the evil spirits. On the back of one of the elephants is a golden casket supposed to contain a tooth and other relics of Buddha.

The zoo at Sydney, Australia, contains the greatest monkey house in the world. Scenes shown provide gales of laughter.

Another thrill picture shows a racing automobile catching fire in front of the Metrotone camera during a contest on a beach in Lancashire, England.

Dr. Tolley, the youngest college president in the country, is shown being inaugurated as head of Allegheny College, Meadville.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: As per your instructions I told Morris Gest he simply would have to get another boy to do his curtain of celebrities . . . Want to play a week at Keith's, Boston? . . . Her manager has presented you with Kate Smith for your Oct. 27 broadcast, nice? . . . Call Ann Pennington . . . In mentioning your hookup always say CBS—because WABC is merely your local stop. Well, things are getting better. The sassy Ritz has gone in for a $1 dinner. They call it a Red Plate. The common people, you know, have been calling it a Blue Plate . . . Eddie Cantor says if you had read his book you would have noticed that he gave Groucho credit for that quip . . . Why don't you let him alone? He used to be a millionaire and he has to work for a living on the stage that he vowed he'd never return to—remember? . . . Mitchell Parish, who wrote the lyrics to "Star Dust," has a new song with a snappy title—"I'm High Hattin' 'Em With My Platinum Blonde" . . . Jack Benny played the Hippodrome, which is too large a theater. He told a gag, and by the time the echo came back he had forgotten that it was his joke and laughed at it himself!

Cab Calloway says not to forget the new Cotton Club revue Sunday night and that he has a new ditty called "Kickin' the Gong Aroun'," which is hot . . . Niven Busch, Jr., has gone to Hollywood for the Warners . . . Have you heard Al Shayne's version of "With You on My Mind"? . . . It's grand . . . Call Mr. Gard . . . Zelli, the popular Parisian cafe host, sails on the Bremen for here on the 18th . . . On the 28th he opens at No. 17 W. 56th and will call his spot "The Royal Box"—the most expensive place of its kind in the world . . . Steve Hannagan of Cosmopolitan, former exploiter for Dempsey, Tunney, Swanson, et al, will marry Ruth Ellery this week . . . Burton Roscoe has started a series on columnists for the Detroit Athletic News. Eugene Field led off. You're next.

Eastman Kodak and du Pont, the latter the makers of cellophane, have developed a picture printing process which threatens to revolutionize the making of rotogravure sections. . . Material used is a new variety of cellophane. It will permit eight colors. . .

You have a 1 p. m. date today at the Harvard Club with the alsle-sitters—if you can get up. . . I told them not to depend on it. . . Tommy Lyman called. He's back at the 61 Club and wishes you'd fall in. . . Mayor Walker's Hispano speedometer registeres over 12,000 miles. . . A woman claiming to be a descendant of Pocahontas wants to know where you got the dope that her real name was Betty, as per your air talk. . . You said "Becky" did'nt you—from Rebecca?

A sequel to those horror tales you've been running is the one about the crowd that attended a party lasting nearly two weeks! . . . One of the merry-makers, about the tenth day, said: "Our host has been strangely silent. Has anybody seen him?" . . . "I have," replied another, "he's been dead a week, but I didn't want to spoil the party by mentioning it." . . . I hear the unfortunates down on the Bowery have a new approach when they beg for coins. . . . They now say: "Will you stake me to a shine, buddy?" . . . Irving Berlin is going to publish Kathryn Parsons' lovely song, "My Girl o' Yesterday." It's the prettiest of the theme songs, I think . . . Elinson says that an advertisement says you can avoid being upset by a wrong number if you chew gum . . . A better way, says Izzy, would be to take the gum away from the operator . . .

Did you know that each coin box telephone has its private key? . . . And the collector has to bring in the serially-numbered coin receptacle with the seal intact? . . . . I see Kathryn Ray returned from the old country without her Mococo . . . Thought you said she was going there to marry him?

Mike, the porter, says would you be so kind as to chuck your debris into the wastebasket and not on the floor. He thinks you don't like him any more . . . Don Parkhurst made fun of you the other day for saying that nobody printed that Hoover-We Want Beer! thing, and feels lousy because you gave the impression that you do not read his sports pages . . I tried to tell him you can't even read your own! . . . I told him not to mind you, as you got that dizzy from incessantly looking down on sports writers . . . He replied, "How would he like a sock in the nose?" so I said back, I thought you might . . . Laura Oakley, an actress, was chief of police of Universal City for many years, if you any Things I. N. K. T. Now items: There's a rumor making the rounds that you don't dare make up any cracks or jokes about Earl Carroll or his shows, so when you ran Kaufman's line an awful lot of legend believers and rumor-spreaders felt a little ridic . . . You might say of "Vanities" that the show has a lotta nice scenery, but the actors get in front of it!—Azever—R. C.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Does It Undo a Grave Sin Simply to Confess It?

She betrayed her husband.

No—don't turn away in shocked contempt. Wait until you hear the whole story.

She loved that husband, he loved her—

But he didn't think it necessary to tell her so.

Once he'd told her so half a dozen times a day. Sneaked out from the office to phone her. Sent her surprise telegrams. Called her on long distance when he had to go on a trip. Brought her a bunch of flowers or a box of candy every Saturday night. Planned picnics—remembered anniversaries——

Once he had done all that—simple little things to do, perhaps. But they turned earth into a paradise for Marian.

Then they got married——

And you know how it is.

He was working hard. Tired at night. After the good dinner he'd stretch out in his easy chair, bury his nose in the sports section—read a few minutes—fall asleep.

And Marian, who'd waited all day for his company—she'd sit watching him. Sit there in that silent room with that sleeping man night after night, night after night—wondering—wondering——

Was this what marriage meant? Was this all marriage meant? Did love always end like this? Did love and life go away and leave you like this—stranded—while you were still young? Was this all—wasn't there any more?

MANY EMPTY HOURS

Night after night—night after night—her thoughts running on like that—

Love him? Of course she loved him. Knew that he loved her. But what did she have to fill the empty hours, warm her empty heart? He had his work. She had— What?

Then—you can almost guess the rest. The other man came . . . he who didn't take her for granted—

Who made her feel young and warm again—

Who made her feel like a woman again . . . and brought back the mystery and adventure of life.

And—for a little while—she lost her head. Reached out for that warmth and delight as a starving man reaches for food—

Are you still blaming her? Have you no pity in your heart for her? Not even now, when she has wakened from her mad dream and is going through her purgatory of remorse? And what will you say in answer to her question? Never did a wife face a harder, crueler problem. What is it? Read and see.

"My Dear Miss Martin:

"I am in terrible trouble. Will you help me to decide what I must do?

"I am married and have betrayed my husband. No one knows it but myself—and the other man. But the shame of it is almost more than I can bear.

PLAYED WITH FIRE

It all began because my husband, who is a good, kind-hearted, but not demonstrative man, got so absorbed in his work and sports that he got so he never paid me a compliment, or even paid any attention to me at all. I am not saying that to criticize him, but only to explain how I came to do what I did. He really is just about the best man on earth, and I know that under his quietness and reserve he really does love me. But he got so he just took me for granted.

I was always lively and liked to be noticed, and I got to feel terribly neglected and lonely. And so it started. I met a man who was not so absorbed in his business, and he took a fancy to me. I knew well enough I was playing with fire. But I never dreamed it would go as far as it did. I was just hungry to hear a compliment again, and to have someone act as if I mattered.

Well, now that it is too late, I have waked up . . . realized what a terrible wrong I have done my husband. And I am simply bowed with shame and remorse. I feel that I must go to him on my knees, and ask him to forgive me. I feel that is the only honest thing to do.

Yet I know it will hurt him if I tell him. I am not thinking of what he will say to me. I can stand that. I deserve it. But I am thinking of how it will hurt him. Yet, can I live a lie? Can I go on letting him think I am a true wife when I am not?

"MARIAN."

SHOULD SHE CONFESS?

Well—what's your answer?

Shall she tell—and give her husband unending bitterness and pain?

Shall she keep silent and feel herself forevermore a cheat?

Will it undo her sin if she does tell? Will it serve any good end? Will it add to her sin if she doesn't tell? Brand her a double traitor? What is your answer?

"I DON'T WANT TO BOAST—BUT!"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Mama Dot goes visiting Mama Bee to have tea and biscuit with peach-plum jelly from Nantucket, and little round cakes—and bit of gossip. And perhaps an exclamation party over any bit of new jewelry or wearable that Mama Bee may have come "in to" since last they met. And Mama Dot brings along Dickie, in a Christopher Robin sweater and dark blue shorts and new black shoes. And, of course, Mama Bee's Bob is waiting for Dickie, having been polished off as to face and neck and ears and hands and knees, almost to the point of extinction, in a blue linen suit, dark blue socks, and new tan shoes. It wouldn't have done for Bee's Bob not to have been as glorified as Dot's Dickie. The two little olive-branches go off about their own deep and delightful business. And then Bee and Dot, now Mamas, proceed to do the things that, as girls all fancy-free, they used to broadcast that THEY would never, NEVER do.

They talk about their children, and the wonder of them!

Once they said, and who hasn't—who never had a child? They said, they would never say their own child was beautiful—when it wasn't or that it was the cleverest, most subtly intelligent infant that they had ever seen. If it WAS or wasn't. And they would know if it wasn't! And they sniffed a bit at the friends who did these things. And who did not seem to know that their children were just ordinary, wholesome, bright (and sometimes not so much for looks) young ones with nothing to stop the world going round for. But, ah well-a-day! Things have changed, and now they have two little replicas of their own. And you should be a mouse and listen to what they say when their pretty feminine voices are turned on.

All about the wonders of the minds and the moods and the talents of Dickie and Bob! "I don't want to BOAST—but" is the refrain of their song. They exchange anecdotes of precious moments; they recount the flashes of genius in statements of their sons; they tell, "what the teacher said." They are generous to one another too. Dot praises Bee's Bob. And Bee praises Dot's Dickie. And they are, oh, so happy doing this! "I wouldn't tell anybody but you, this—dear. They would think I was boasting."

Do you think, are you single, and saying, "I would never brag about MY child if I had one?"

Well, you will, when you get one. Just as Bee and Dot, and I, do.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Condolence Card

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My friend's husband died. Do I send my card, or are there special cards for this occasion? I am a foreigner, and not long a resident here. Please let me thank you most sincerely for your answer. F.

And let me thank you most sincerely too, F., for the compliment you pay me by giving me the privilege of helping you. I am always especially anxious to help anyone who is not accustomed to our customs, for there is nothing more confusing to one's state of mind than the differences to which one must adapt oneself in a new country.

You are thoroughly right in your judgment—to send your visiting-card with a message of sympathy on it, or leave your card at the door of your friend's home. Do not, under any conditions, send "ready-made" cards for an occasion of this kind, which calls for a personal message. Indeed, don't ever be inveigled to send ready-made cards when they are inappropriate—for congratulations, for thank-you-for-your-present, or thank-you-for-your-message or indeed thank-you for anything.

Of course, if your friend is a close friend, you will also want to write her a note of condolence—not a long one, but a "deep" one, one that assures her of your sympathy and of your friendliness and of your eagerness to help her, if she will allow you to. It is such letters that help very much "when the shadow falls." Do come again when you think that I can help.

His "Poor Points"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going about with a young man of 31 years of age. He has good points and very poor points, as I call them. Here they are—the poor points.

1—He never assists me on or off with my coat in the theater.

2—He always lets me alight from the street car first without any attempt to assist me across the street.

3—When dancing and he accidentally steps on my foot, he never as much as says, "Pardon me" or "Excuse me," when he is at fault. I always say "Pardon me."

4—When eating in a restaurant, shouldn't he give the waiter both our orders, after I have told him what I want? He thinks the girl should give her own order to the waiter.

MARY.

1. He should.

2. He should precede you from the car, to be in a position to assist you as you step out of the car.

3. He should say—at least occasionally—"I'm sorry," or "I'm so sorry."

4. You are right—he should give both your order and his own to the waiter.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Faces Task of Explaining Situation to Boys

The mental processes of children are so incomprehensible at times that I wasted no breath or time in conjecture as to the conclusion to which Junior and Roderick announced they had come. Instead, I smiled down at them, my irritation vanishing at the look of eagerness in the freckled, sunburned faces.

"All right, suppose you tell me what you think I want of you," I said.

They looked at each other, as if for encouragement, then by some tacit, unspoken agreement, Junior took the floor.

"You're going to tell us which of those names, 'Ruby Pearl' or 'Opal Violet,' you're going to give the baby," he said hopefully.

I sat down abruptly. His tone was so confiding, and both boys were looking at me with such an earnest expectancy that my heart traveled into my shoes at the disappointment which I must give them. My mind had been so filled with the troubles of the older boys that when Junior said he and Roderick knew what I wanted of them, I had supposed that they had guessed my wish to have them keep silent about the burning of the white flannel trousers.

Bitterly I regretted the evasion with which I had treated their first revelation of the names. They evidently had banked largely upon the fact that I had not promptly negatived their proposal, and their disappointment would be all the more keen when they realized the truth.

I had a most difficult task in front of me. I realized that. I knew how tenaciously children cling to an idea, especially one which has its roots in their affection and their imagination, as this one had. I must tread most warily or I would not only grieve and disappoint them, but would shake their confidence in my good faith—to me one of the gravest risks a mother can run.

I waited a few seconds before speaking, groping for some satisfactory solution of the problem. Then, as their little faces began to lengthen, I spoke softly with the realization that appealing to their tenderness and to the chivalry which lies latent in every man child, was my only hope.

"Before I tell you about the names," I began, "I want to talk to you just a little bit about Granzie and Grandpa. You love them both very much, don't you?"

They nodded their heads vigorously. Roderick was as emphatic as Junior, for my father has made him feel that he is as much a "really truly grandson" as Junior.

"You wouldn't want to hurt them in any way, would you?"

Vigorous shakes of both small heads, then Junior broke into rapid speech.

"How would it hurt them to give the baby one of our names?" he demanded shrewdly.

"Because they are old and they haven't any little children of their own, and they love their grandchildren so much that they like to give them names they like. They didn't get a chance to give you your names, for reasons that I'll tell you some time, if you don't tease me about it. But they do want to choose a name for your little sister, and I think you're big men enough to forget about the names you wanted, even if you do like them better, and let Granzie and Grandpa have their own way. Don't answer me now. I'm going into Aunt Katherine's room a minute and let you talk it over. But I'm counting on you. You're my big, unselfish boys, you know, and—you know one of the first rules of the Scouts is to be kind to old people."

I was a bit ashamed about having "lugged in the Boy Scout by the ears," as Dicky could have expressed it. But I knew it was a most effective chord to strike.

I went into Katherine's room and closed the door quietly behind me. Turning from the crib in which she evidently had just laid the baby, she smiled quizzically at me, not betraying in the least the effort it must have been for her to evince amusement at anything.

"Administering the high justice, the middle, and the low?" she asked.

"Something like that." I said. I told her rapidly, in low tones, of the accident to the clothing of the older boys, of my wish to silence the younger ones concerning it, and of the mistake the little boys had made concerning my wish to speak to them.

I had barely finished when the door opened behind me, and Junior's voice, curiously subdued, accosted me.

"Will you come in now, Mums?" he asked. "We've decided what we're going to do."

Rare Malta Fever Is Similar to Typhoid

Malta fever is not a common disease. I shall speak of it because several of my readers have written requesting information about the ailment.

Dr. Copeland

Malta fever is an infection resembling typhoid fever. Its cause was first discovered in 1887. The disease is accompanied by profuse sweating, constipation, pains resembling those of rheumatism or neuralgia, and often swelling of the joints. The ailment is not a serious one, but it is stubborn, of long-drawnout and indefinite duration. It is particularly prevalent along the Mediterranean Coast. It is also found along the Rio Grande River and elsewhere in the southwest section of the United States.

The disease primarily affects goats and is then transmitted to man. As a rule persons afflicted with this disease have been drinking unboiled goat's milk. It is found, too, in persons employed in the goat-raising industry. Occasionally, Malta fever is found in sections where there are no goats and independent of the drinking of goat's milk.

As a result of studies made of this disease, it is found that the infection may occur through wounds of the body, through the lining of the mouth or intestines. To these the infecting material is carried by food or drink.

In the majority of cases, as I have intimated, it follows the drinking of raw goat's milk. Goats that are attacked by Malta fever continue for a long time to give infected milk.

There are some who believe that Malta fever can be conveyed through the bite of a parasite. This theory has never been proved. However, it is wise to avoid insect bites if possible.

While the drinking of goat's milk is the common method of transmission, there are many other ways in which the disease may occur. Infected food and actual contact with the disease, may result in Malta fever. Fortunately such cases are extremely rare.

The prevention of this disease is simple. For this reason we have never been afflicted with a severe outbreak of this unusual ailment. The first prevention is the elimination from the herds of all infected goats. If this is not possible for any reason, all milk from such herds should be pasteurized. Over an area where Malta fever is prevalent, it is advisable that the milk of cows, too, be pasteurized.

Patients who have the disease must be treated in a manner similar to the treatment of typhoid fever. They should be isolated so as to prevent the spread of this infection. These individuals should never be discharged as cured until it has been definitely shown that they no longer harbor the infection.

In addition, general sanitary methods such as protection against flies and mosquitoes should be practiced. Removal of dust and the importance of cleanliness are imperative in the control of this unusual disease.

When Baby Cries

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Probably one of the hardest things a mother has to learn during the infancy of her child is judgment as to when the baby is crying from a real need and when he is merely crying so she will appear, and possibly pick him up, walk with him or fondle him—or give him what she thinks he wants, to stop the sounds which are fearful and baffling to her.

At first there seems to be no difference in the baby's various cries, but, as the mother deliberately listens for variations, she soon learns to detect the imperious cry which means: "This is a dandy way to get myself noticed and to have a little chat with mother."

Well, baby deserves many little tete-a-tete with mother, but, if she is wise, she will see that he only gets them when he is a HAPPY baby, NOT when he demands them by raising the roof with his howls.

And mother must start early in order to avoid the spoiled cry, for babies seem to be endowed with an uncanny system of subjugating mother and the rest of the family IF they're allowed to get away with it.

Baby's "only language is a cry" at first, and should be given intelligent consideration. Is he in need of food? Clean clothing? Is the cry the sharp intermittent one of pain? He should be examined for pins, tight clothing, and given a drink of water if it is not his feeding time; in short, he should be made comfortable or, if the mother feels that he is in pain, the family physician should be called as the final judge.

If the baby has nothing wrong with him and all his needs are filled, then it is safe to suppose that he is but exercising his tyranny and this should be met with total failure unless the whole family desires to become abject slaves in the task of making an unreasonable, domineering human being out of an infant who just as easily can be taught to be happy and reasonable.

We can't get much in this world by yipping for it, and the sooner baby discovers this—and goes about satisfying his desires in a happy, co-operative spirit—the easier will be his whole road through life.

Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Rebidding

While normal trump support consists either of A-X, K-X, Q-J, or X-X-X, partner may have another declaration equally good for himself, and considerably better for you, provided you afford him an opportunity to disclose his second make, rather than assisting his first make immediately. Suppose that your partner bids 1-Spade upon the following hand:

Hand No. 1.

♠ A-K-9-6
♥ A-K-5-4
♣ 10-9-6
♦ 7-3

Instead of at once assisting partner upon the hand given below, you should bid 2-diamonds, to discover what your partner really has.

Hand No. 2.

♠ 7-5-3
♥ 9-8-7-5
♣ 8
♦ A-K-Q-10-4

Of course your partner will overcall you with 2-hearts. Now you may shoot the works—bid 4-hearts. At spades your partner readily may lose two spades, one heart and one club trick, preventing him from going game. Played at hearts your partner may be able to discard two losing spades upon your diamonds, thus losing only a single heart and one club.

On the other hand your shift of 1-spade into 2-diamonds may find your partner with the following hand, while you hold what previously was called your hand.

Hand No. 3.

♠ K-Q-J-10-8-6
♥ 4
♣ K-Q-7-5
♦ J-7

It becomes your partner's duty to jump your bid of 2 diamonds into 3-spades, and you must end contracting with 4-spades, which must easily be made.

Never rebid a four-card suit or a poor five-card suit, unless partner has at once supported the latter. You may rebid any suit of five or more cards when they are worth as much as four probable tricks, such as A-K-Q-X-X, A-K-J-X-X, A-Q-J-X-X, or A-K-X-X-X.

Instead of rebidding a good five-card suit that partner has once denied, if possible show him another equally good suit. On the hand shown below, having shown partner spades, bid 2-Hearts over his 1-No-Trump. If partner bids 2-No Trump over your second suit, rebid the lower value suit (3-Hearts), leaving it to partner to decide whether he should bid game at one of the three suggested makes, or support your spades by a shift; in case he can do no better than that you had better quit; there appears to be no game in sight.

Hand No. 4.

♠ K-Q-10-8-4
♥ A-J-10-7-3
♣ 6
♦ 9-7

Avoid a selfish desire to act as declarer. Having on the following hand first bid 2-Hearts over partner's 1-Spade, do not bid 3-Diamonds—bid 3 Spades in case your partner rebids his spades. Four-odd can be made just four times as often as five-odd.

Hand No. 5.

♠ 8-6-4
♥ A-J-9-8-5
♣
♦ K-J-9-4-2

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When will the dear little dollies learn that heavily painted lips are old stuff now? One might as well wear mutton-leg sleeves and a bustle. Make-up is soft pedaled, it is slick and subtle; we've had painted faces for years now, and there's no longer any interest in vivid facial scenery. Sensible women exercise, eat with discrimination, grow their own rouge.

Black is the worst possible color for elderly ladies. Only the young and beautiful should wear it. For the girls who have gathered many birthdays, gray is lovely. They should include in every frock a bit of bright color—cerise, blue or bright green. Makes white hair show up and glisten beautifully. Velvet is a flattering fabric when one's petals have fallen; satin is exacting and cruel. Too sleek and shiny.

That hangdog, down-in-the-mouth expression digs in horrid lines extending from nostrils to lip corners. No good putting on cosmetics as long as muscles drag. Frowning is responsible for lines between the eyes, squinting for rays around them. Many wrinkles are self-inflicted. The cure for all is a nightly five-minute message, a professional treatment once a week, sweet disposition, good groceries three times a day, plenty of sleep, much cold water applied to the skin.

Always Dead Tired?

How sad! Sallow complexion, coated tongue, poor appetite, bad breath, pimply skin and always tired. What's wrong? Chances are you're poisoned by clogged bowels and inactive liver. Take this famous prescription used constantly in place of calomel by men and women for 20 years—Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They are harmless yet very effective. A compound of vegetable ingredients. They act easily upon the bowels, help free the system of poison caused by faulty elimination and tone up liver.

Rosy cheeks, clear eyes and youthful energy make a success of life. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, nightly. Know them by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c. All druggists.

Question a Day:

How do orchestras obtain "special permission of the copyright owners" for playing numbers over the air and is there any charge?—Miss M., "Pitt."

Answer—A wire or letter is sent the American Society of Authors, Composers and Musicians in New York requesting permission to play the particular selection. The whim of a secretary then determines the fate of the request, and, if granted, a wire or telegram is sent the orchestra giving it permission to go ahead. There is no charge.

Impressions

The University of Pittsburgh has many embryonic newspapermen in its ranks. We had the delight of introducing several of these scribes to visiting celebrities at the recent Radio Show in Duquesne Garden.

Leonard E. Mendlowitz, of McKeesport, who writes for the Pitt Weekly, cornered Graham McNamee and turned in to us a true character delineation of the famous sport announcer. Here it is:

By LEONARD E. MENDLOWITZ

Impressions of Graham McNamee by someone meeting him for the first time: Why, he isn't as tall and impressive looking as his pictures would have you believe. . . . No, on the contrary, he looks as plain and human as you or I . . . and he's quite stout . . . I believe he would tip the scales at about 180 . . . about 5 feet 9 inches tall . . . he looks pleasant enough . . . but I wonder how he takes to reporters!

Thanks lots, Darrell, for introducing me to Graham . . . I have more assurance now . . . Hello, Mr. McNamee! May I have a few moments of your valuable time? . . . He didn't even snap at me as they said he would; he smiled and said, "Certainly." . . . "What do you want to know?" . . . "Darn, I forgot!" . . . "That's all right, we'll just talk." . . .

He's been in radio work for the past 10 years . . . in every department . . . used to be a concert singer before that . . . has a deep baritone voice, which distinguishes him from anyone else. . . . You know, one of those deep, vibrant voices which brings vivid pictures just by their intonation. . . . A voice with personality . . . thinks his singing voice is pretty terrible, and hasn't sung over the air since a commercial program more than a year ago . . . doesn't have any favorite song, because "there are too many beautiful songs" . . . reserves singing for bathtub occasions.

Has acquired that extensive sporting vernacular by participating in athletics . . . never went to college . . . but played baseball, football and tennis for years . . . that little scar on his cheek is a souvenir of a football game . . . likes to announce athletic contests more than any other kind of a program . . . has announced most of the major programs and events of the past seven years . . . and still gets a big kick out of it.

Doesn't look particularly broken-up because his wife is divorcing him . . . oh, well, he has so many interests. . . . George Hicks, contact chief with the NBC was with him . . . pals . . . a modern Damon-Pythias friendship . . . Graham gave Hicks all the credit due him on Hicks' first major assignment at Lakehurst, New Jersey . . . but forgot Hicks' first name . . . and they're still friends!

Success hasn't gone to his head . . . only to his heart . . . curses like a trouper . . . surprisingly enough, he prefers conservative clothes . . . dark blue . . . doesn't look like a celebrity . . . until you hear that fine voice . . . and then you know, it belongs to the one and only Graham McNamee, a name synonymous with the miracle of radio!

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The radio shoguns assert they are spending more money than ever before on daytime programs. Save on holidays with their opportunities for special microphone events the programs indicate a woeful need of some mental concentration on the part of the shoguns to supplement their financial gesture.

Daytime programs continue to hit a low average of entertainment. They lack diversity and novelty. Directed chiefly to the housewives of the republic, they are teeming with household advice, endless chatter on cooking and gardening and taking care of little Percival.

We have suspected that the little woman has long been fed up with the type of radio program labeled out to her daytime period. We recently conducted a little survey of our own to learn if our suspicion were well founded. It is. Fifteen little women out of 20 assured us they no longer tune in on morning programs.

* * *

They spoke frankly to us about the matter, said they could endure no longer the monotonous similarity of the program, could no longer tune into hordes of feminine voices, speaking shrilly, dully and patronizingly between gusts of advertising blather, on topics of the home.

* * *

It does seem as if greater mental effort could be made by the broadcasters in satisfying feminine tastes, as if they could spread some of their high class evening entertainment, of which they have such a plentiful supply, over daytime hours.

Save for the service bands, not one musical organization of the slightest claim is heard in daytime hours. Nor do the daytime hours, save on the rarest occasion, catch any vocalist of the first rank.

It's a wonder the housewives have not risen up in rebellion, haven't reached for the nearest hatchet and split up their radio for firewood. They may yet, if a halt is not called.

Revolt Sentences Commuted by Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 17.—(AP)—The government issued a decree last night commuting to life imprisonment all death sentences which had been meted out to those found guilty of leading the recent naval revolt.

Fifteen former members of the Navy were under death sentence as a result of the revolt. The last four were condemned by court-martial last week.

KOMICS THRONG TO MEETINGS

Thirteen! Wonder if that is unlucky? Just 13 chapters of the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club held meetings today. But wait a minute. If there is a jinx in "13," let's chase it away at once by making it 14, adding the independent Junior Komic Club that held a meeting at the Mt. Oliver-Harris Theater.

Reports indicate all meetings were largely attended and hundreds of new members enrolled. In every theater there was a special entertainment for the youngsters. Andy Benson, Pittsburgh executive of the Boy Scouts, talked to the Enright Chapter and told a lot of interesting stories. Tampa, the Magician, entertained at the Etna-Harris Chapter.

At all Warner Theater meetings the details regarding the special Sunday afternoon party to be given at the downtown Stanley Theater were given out. Every youngster who gets his special Stanley Theater card stamped for attending four out of five meetings will be given a free ticket to the Stanley party.

Every boy and girl desiring to participate in activities of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club is invited to send in the application blank on this page. They will get in return an official button, membership card and will also be assigned to a chapter.

RAIL BOND AID STATEMENT PENDING

Hoover Expected to Make Plan Public Following I. C. C. Decision on Rates

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—It was indicated by administration officials that the White House may say something within a short time regarding its study of the rail road bond situation. The administration has been seriously considering the matter of railroad bonds for some time. However nothing definite as to when the White House would comment on its study was forthcoming.

It is understood in high administration circles that the President does not intend to make public his plan for assisting railroad securities until after the Interstate Commerce Commission has handed down its decision on the petition of carriers for a 15 per cent rate increase.

DETAILS UNKNOWN

This, it was declared, cannot be interpreted as meaning the White House is anticipating an adverse decision. Rather, the administration believes it more desirable to leave out of the general railroad picture anything which might be taken as administration intimidation or pressure over the commission.

Just what the plan calls for has never been given out. However, through a form of deduction, it is indicated that it calls for some means of relieving banks holding depressed railroad securities. Such a plan would call for loans by some new agency on railroad bonds.

PLAN NOT COMPLETE

The President's plan is not in final shape for publication as yet, and that was one reason why it is expected that the Commerce Commission, which has been working on the rate decision before the President makes public his plan for aiding railroad securities.

While little discussion could be had from administrative officials it was declared that there is no definite knowledge that the commission will hand down its decision today, as has been rumored.

Best informed observers declare that no decision has as yet been reached on the rate increase. Prohipper and legal forces within the commission are understood to be still in disagreement.

CANADA'S GOLD OUTPUT UP

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—Canadian gold production during 1931 will approximate $50,000,000 in value. At present, virtually all the output of the Dominion gold mines is being shipped to Ottawa.

In 1930 Canada's gold production reached record total of 2,102,068 fine ounces, valued at $43,453,601, as against 1929 output of 1,928,308 fine ounces, valued at $39,861,663, according to final figures.

Gold held second place in point of value among Canada's mineral products in 1930, being surpassed only by coal. Value of gold produced represented 15.5 per cent of total mineral output of the Dominion. As a world producer of gold, Canada in 1930 ranked second, the Transvaal being first with production of 10,719,769 fine ounces. The United States (not including the Philippine Islands) came third with an output of 2,053,659 fine ounces. Southern Rhodesia produced 547,630 fine ounces last year and Western Australia 416,369 fine ounces.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

MARKET SHOWS FIRM TONE AT START

General Motors, U. S. Steel And American Can Gain; Price Changes Narrow

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The stock market opened with a firm tone today, although price changes were largely narrow. Baltimore and Ohio and Allied Chemical rose 1 point and issues up ¼ to ½ included General Motors, American Can, Woolworth, Procter and Gamble and American Tobacco B. U. S. Steel opened up ⅛. American Telephone opened off ¼, then recovered.

Prominent in the overnight news was the speech of Richard Whitney, president of the Exchange, in which he said that covering by the short interest had tided the market over the crisis precipitated by England's gold standard suspension. He estimated the peak of the 1931 short interest at 5,589,700 shares on May 25, whereas by October 5 it was 2,612,600 shares.

The Reichsbank's weekly statement showed a reserve ratio of 28.6 per cent against 30.11 per cent a week ago. Foreign currency reserves and gold holdings were off.

Brokerage houses express general satisfaction over the action of the markets. Weakness in U. S. government and other high-grade bonds reflects firmer money, but the rise in stocks yesterday and improvement in many bonds of second grade encouraged the optimists. Wall street is manifesting considerable interest in the forthcoming conferences between President Hoover and Premier Laval, especially as they may touch on international debt matters.

The interest rate allowed on foreign deposits in New York Clearing House member banks has been lifted ½ of 1 per cent, a move which is expected to encourage retention here of net foreign balances, now amounting to about $600,000,000.

Sterling opened at $3.87, off ½ cent.

Collateral Value Put on Credit Notes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—(AP)—Gold notes of the National Credit Corporation will be accepted by the Treasury as collateral on deposits of public money in designated institutions.

The announcement was made today by Secretary Mellon. It gives to the notes of the corporation created at the suggestion of President Hoover the same collateral value now accorded to commercial paper and bankers' acceptances.

Smelter Copper Production Down

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—World smelter production of copper as distinct from refinery output in September was 120,689 short tons, compared to 121,655 tons in August and 156,705 tons in September, 1930, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

PARK TO HAVE LARGE CARE FUND

Over $1,000,000 to Be Put In Trust to Provide for Perpetual Maintenance

Although Allegheny County Memorial Park is a comparatively new cemetery, it has set aside $200,000 in its prepetual care fund. This amount has been invested under the terms of the trust agreement in a conservative manner.

In order to insure its safety this fund has been bonded to its full amount with the National Surety Company and, in accordance with legal requirements, the bond was submitted to the Court of Quarter Sessions of Allegheny County and approved by Judge Gray.

The perpetual care law which became effective in this state in 1909 requires that cemeteries established after that date set aside a percentage of the gross proceeds derived from the sale of lots for the perpetual care of the property. Allegheny County Memorial Park, through investing 50 per cent more than the state law requires, expects to establish a perpetual care fund of approximately $1,000,000 when all lots are paid for.

The Allegheny County Memorial Park represents a distinct innovation for a cemetery in Pittsburgh. The depressing appearance of the old type of burial place has been totally avoided.

There will be no crowding of ghostly tombstones. The cemetery fits its name. In appearance it is a park with winding roads extending through beautifully landscaped country.

Each grave is marked by a bronze tablet set flush with the ground. In the future the beauty of the park will be increased by the construction of buildings which will include a chapel and a chimes tower.

GAIN EXPECTED IN AUTO STEEL DEMAND

Deliveries Started on Big Order From Ford Motor; Prices Continue Steady

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel demand of the automobile industry is believed to have passed its low point and is expected to increase continuously. Ford has bought steel to make about 50,000 cars during November and deliveries on a small part of the steel have already been released. Chevrolet is buying steel as are other car makers.

Automobile production is taken out of its usual course by the bringing out of new models being postponed from midsummer to late in the year, whereby October promises to be the low month of the year instead of December, with progressive and marked increases thereafter.

RAIL BUYING UP

The farm implement industry has reduced its inventory and has begun buying steel a little more freely, with prospects of heavier purchases as it enters the season for making implements for spring distribution and use.

Rail inquiry is sluggish but rolling will begin next month on the Chesapeake & Ohio's recent orders for 45,000 tons and there will be some releases on old contracts whereby rail production promises to increase from the very low rate of the last few weeks.

CURRENT RATE LOW

A new thought, not yet at least representing majority opinion, has arisen in the steel trade that precedent may be violated and steel production increase to the end of the year instead of having usual seasonal decrease. The argument takes cognizance of the three items mentioned, automobiles, farm implements and rails.

Even at the worst, however, steel production could not decline much from the present low rate and the uniform precedent is very strong for a sharp upturn just after the turn of the year. Increase has occurred every year in the last 10 and has been all the more marked when the old year had a poor ending. Ingot production in the past week has been at about 27 per cent, against 28 per cent for four weeks preceding.

TO BOOST WIRE

Finished steel prices continue to make a perfect record as to maintenance, with the usual exception of irregularities in lump quantities of plain steel for large fabricated structural steel jobs. The lines advanced some months ago, sheets, strips and wire products, hold as well as do others. A further advance in wire products is expected for the first quarter of the new year.

The price of tin plate is usually adjusted annually and there was a 25-cent reduction at the first of this month to $4.75, this price to apply to the remainder of the year and to contracts for the first half of the new year. Actual contracting does not usually begin until later and producers are not soliciting contracts as yet. Other steel products, except rails, are now commonly bought for prompt shipment only.

LEADERS WORK TO DECREASE IDLENESS

Survey Shows Industrial Heads Doing All in Power To Relieve Unemployment

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Wise business management at this time is especially concerned with plans for spreading as broadly as possible opportunities for gainful employment during the coming critical months. This column has been making a survey of the plans of executives for the coming six months.

Mr. Rukeyser

I have invited other employers to follow the example of Richard H. Grant, vice president in charge of sales of General Motors, who recently took the public into his confidence concerning plans for the first half of 1932. Mr. Grant said that the corporation planned to employ at least as many men this coming winter as last, and added that the corporation expected larger sales during the first half of 1932 than in the corresponding period of 1931.

HARD TO GAUGE

Hiram S. Brown, president, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, in a message to this column, declares:

"The RKO Corporation is endeavoring to conduct its business on as nearly a normal basis as possible, in spite of the fact that general wage cuts, increased unemployment and an increasing spirit of pessimism with regard to the financial and and business outlook, have adversely affected theater attendance during the past 60 days. Within the past week, however, there seems to be some improvement, and if general conditions improve, both actually and psychologically, the amusement industry will probably be able to continue reasonably normal operations.

"It must be obvious to you, however, that general conditions and rapidly changing public sentiment have such an effect on the operations of amusement enterprises that a prophecy as to operations six months in advance is almost impossible."

SPREAD EMPLOYMENT

George F. Johnson, president of the Endicott Johnson Company, makers of shoes, in frankly discussing his plans, told me:

"Personally, I have thought that each industry, large and small, must—to use an old, time worn expression—'work out its own salvation' so to manage their business as to do the most good and create the least harm. Meaning, to keep as many people as possible employed, and give them as much time and as good income as it is humanly possible to do."

New Currency Provided by Federal Reserve

This is the sixth article of a series describing the workings of the Federal Reserve System and discussing the changes in its operations which probably will be suggested at the next session of Congress.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

IN PREVIOUS ARTICLES the pooling of bank reserves with the Federal Reserve System and the manner in which money is taken out of circulation or put into circulation through rediscounting or open market transactions was discussed.

But the reserves on deposit with the Federal Reserve Banks do not provide the only currency which can be put at the disposal of business. A new type of currency, the Federal Reserve note, was created with the birth of the system.

These notes can be secured by United States government obligations or by eligible short term promissory notes or bankers' acceptances representing actual industrial, commercial or agricultural transactions.

In other words, when a Federal Reserve Bank discounts commercial paper, loans a bank money on government securities or buys bills or securities, these assets immediately form a basis for the issuance of currency.

Gold Reserve Needed

FEDERAL RESERVE NOTES are issued with a new medium of security, but to guard against inflation the law provides that there must be a gold reserve of at least 40 per cent of the outstanding amount of the notes. In actual practice this gold reserve is usually far above the minimum requirement. At present it stands at 61.8 per cent.

In other words, two and a half times as many Federal Reserve notes as gold certificates can be issued on the same gold reserve.

The importance of this in giving the Reserve Banks power to provide a flexible currency is great. At present the gold reserves of the system amount to about $3,000,000,000. Against this, note and deposit liabilities amount to about $4,700,000,000. If $1,120,000,000 in gold certificates were to be paid out, the reserve would be reduced to 40 per cent. On the other hand, about $2,800,000,000 in Federal Reserve notes could be issued before the reserve would be at the minimum level.

Not All Credit Used

THE CREDIT RESOURCES of the Federal Reserve System are never fully employed. The purpose of the organization is to provide a reservoir of funds for emergency requirements. With this in view, the tendency among Federal Reserve Bank directors is to discourage banks from making continuous use of large amounts of Reserve credit and substituting it for bank capital.

Under ordinary conditions, banks borrow from the Federal Reserve for short periods only. They make use of these facilities to meet peak demands and pay off their indebtedness as rapidly as possible.

This policy acts as a constant brake against the danger of Federal Reserve credit causing dangerous inflation, and it maintains the system in a state of sufficient liquidity to enable it to meet any unforeseen condition. If the banks had been allowed to borrow to the full extent of reserve credit in recent years, the influx of gold to this country might have resulted in even greater inflation than actually took place during the last business boom. It would also have exposed the country to the danger of a credit shortage if a large part of this gold should have been withdrawn.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—International Business Machines Corporation has completed the installation at the League of Nations headquarters, Geneva, Switzerland, of an International-Filene-Finlay Translator, which will permit addresses to be translated simultaneously into six different languages for 700 international delegates.

This is the first permanent installation of the translating system, the patent rights for which were acquired only a few months ago by International Business Machines Corporation from Edward A. Filene, Boston drygoods merchant and economist.

GENERAL TRADE SHOWS GAIN

General trade shows a slight improvement with cooler weather moderately stimulating demand for seasonal merchandise, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review.

Department stores have been conducting special sales with fair results, but the smaller stores are not transacting their usual volume of business for this season of the year. Jobbers of drygoods and wearing apparel report demand slightly improved, but still not very active, and materially affected by changing weather conditions. Demand for shoes continues largely for low and medium priced lines, the movement not being large. The hide and leather markets continue quiet, with prices showing an easier tendency.

Crude oil production shows a slight increase. Bituminous coal production shows little change, with the demand very slow and prices low.

Slowness continues to characterize the condition of collections in this district.

SCHOOL NOTES STUDENT GAIN

According to figures announced by President James F. Grady, Pittsburgh Academy's registration this year is 35 per cent above that of 1930.

The day school enrollment is approximately 40 per cent greater than last year's. The evening school enrollment consists for the most part of those who are employed during the day, and shows an increase of 30 per cent. The academic division, in which state accredited high school subjects are taught, is 24 per cent above that of 1930. In the school of business, where a 36 per cent increase is recorded, the classes which seem most popular are practical selling, advertising, practical speaking, psychology and stenotypy.

Additional classes have been scheduled in all subjects during the week of October 12-16 to provide for late registrations.

BUILDING OF FAMOUS CUB CHAMPIONS

CHARLES WEBB MURPHY, who died in Chicago last night at the age of 63, was for almost a decade one of the most prominent and colorful magnates in the annals of modern major league baseball. As owner and president of the Chicago National League club, purchased from James A. Hart after the 1905 season, it was Murphy who appointed Frank Chance manager to succeed Frank Selee and thereby opened the famous Chance regime that was to give to baseball one of the greatest teams in all the history of the game.

Frank Chance

It was said of Murphy that he had run a dime into a million dollars. A former Cincinnati drug clerk and newspaper man and a publicity representative of the New York Giants, he gained the friendship of Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati publisher, and when the latter purchased the Chicago club he turned it over to Murphy and told him to pay for it at his own convenience out of the club's earnings. The Cubs became a mint and Murphy rose to the ownership and great wealth without investing a cent originally.

BUT IT WAS due to Murphy's own business acumen and Chance's baseball smartness that the club was built up into a world beater and turned into a gold mine. The Cubs had finished third in 1905 but had the foundation material for greater success later, the players coming to Murphy in the purchase, including such stars as Chance, Johnny Evers and Joe Tinker, infielders; Johnny Kling, catcher; Three-Finger Brown, Ed Reulbach, Carl Lundgren and Bob Wicker, pitchers, and Frank Schulte, Shorty Slagle and Artie (Circus Solly) Hofman, outfielders.

On this base, Murphy and Chance proceeded to build a pennant winner. Before the 1906 season opened they traded Jimmy Casey, Buttons Briggs, Jack McCarthy and Billy Maloney to Brooklyn for Outfielder Jimmy Sheckard; swapped Jake Weimer to Cincinnati for Third Baseman Harry Steinfeldt, and obtained Pitcher Jake Taylor from the St. Louis Nationals for Fred Beebe, Pete Noone and $7,000.

THEY CONTINUED THEIR building in May by trading Hans Lobert to Cincinnati for Pitcher Jack Harper, and completed it in June by getting Pitcher Orval Overall from the same club in a swap for Bob Wicker. Now set, the Cubs ran away with the pennant in 1906, repeated in 1907 and added a third flag in 1908 by winning the post-season play-off of the Merkle game against the Giants after a great three-cornered fight with New York and Pittsburgh.

The Bruins lost the world series to the White Sox in 1906, but won it against the Tigers in 1907 and 1908. They won the pennant again in 1910, but lost the Derby to the A's. In 1906, the Cubs won 116 games, a major league record that still stands. In each of four years out of their first five under Murphy they won more than 100 games, setting a three-year record of 322 victories and a five-year mark of 530 wins.

MEANWHILE MURPHY WAS winning individual prominence in the circle of magnates. He was the stormy petrel of many a league meeting, and engaged in numerous controversies that kept his name in the headlines on the sport pages. Even up to the time of his death he had an indirect connection with baseball, for though he sold the Cubs to Charley Weeghman after the Federal League died in 1915 he remained owner of the National League grounds in Philadelphia, where the Phillies still play, under a long-term lease. In that role he had another controversy with William F. Baker, late president of the Phillies. Other National League club owners repeatedly urged Baker to sell back the lease to Murphy and move the Phils to Shibe Park, where he could accommodate larger crowds, but Baker refused to move out of spite toward Murphy, who wanted the ground for the purpose of establishing an automobile business.

Tom Keady

KARL DAVIS and Tom Keady, Western Reserve football chiefs, were not dismayed at the prospect that their team would be outclassed and decisively beaten in the game with Pitt at the Stadium this afternoon. They are building for the future, and even defeats serve as a means to an end in developing players and giving them gridiron knowledge and experience.

Coach Keady says he will try out a lot of his sophomore material this year, even at the risk of losing by big scores. His main object is to develop material for the future, and he is confident that his present sophomores, combined with the fine freshman material at hand, soon will put Reserve on the map from a football viewpoint.

ONE OF THE most popular of winter sports is about to come in for fans of the Pittsburgh district, Ice-skating devotees who have been awaiting word as to when they would get a chance to indulge in their favorite pastime may put their steel blades in readiness for next Monday night. Duquesne Garden will open for skating at that time.

For the present there will be daily skating at the Garden in the evening only. Afternoon sessions will not be started until colder weather arrives. The first home hockey game is scheduled for November 12.

THE FINE KICKING of Fullback Sil Zananelli aided the Dukes greatly while they were playing heads-up football last night and gaining a moral victory by holding Georgetown to a scoreless tie. His accurate punting with a wet ball kept the Hoyas very much on the defensive in the second half. Ox Bordeau, Georgetown's big fullback, also turned in a fine performance, though slowed up by the heavy going. He plunged well and backed up the line like a champion. Another feature was the work of Niccolai, a converted tackle, at end for Duquesne. No regular end could have done better and Niccolai may stay right on the terminal job.

THE JOHNSTON FAMILY will be pretty much the whole thing in directing big-time boxing in New York. Following the appointment of the veteran manager and promoter, James J. Johnston, to take charge of all fistic activities at Madison Square Garden, his son, James J., Jr., has been made matchmaker at St. Nicholas Rink.

Jimmy Johnston, Jr.

And that's not mentioning the fact that Charles Johnston, brother of James J., Sr., and naturally the uncle of James J., Jr., will continue to manage a stable of fighters.

THE SENIOR JOHNSTON is stepping into a big pair of shoes in taking over the place of the late Tex Rickard and endeavoring to put boxing at the Garden back on the plane to which Rickard lifted it.

Jimmy himself realizes it. "Rickard was a genius," he says, "and you can't get away from it—a genius at visioning what a fight would draw. There was no one like him."

BUT MANY EASTERN boxing men will tell you that there's no one like Johnston, either. In support of this, they point out that while other New York promoters were losing their shirts this year Jimmy put over four highly successful shows at the Brooklyn ball park and brought out or revived four heavyweights who will now draw a gate anywhere—Sharkey, Carnera, Walker and Schaaf. Johnston once outsmarted even Richard himself. When Richard first went to New York, Johnston leased the old Garden for $1,000 a night and then sub-leased it to Tex for $15,500, a clear profit of $14,500 a show.

PITT, RESERVE DUEL TODAY

BLUFF ELEVEN OUTPLAYS HOYAS

Duquesne and Georgetown made a lot of fuss at Forbes Field last night as they inaugurated gridiron relations, but got nowhere. The game wound up in a scoreless deadlock before a half-frozen crowd of about 5,000, the majority of whom went home satisfied that the Dukes had outplayed the Hoyas and deserved the biggest part of the plaudits for giving the Washington eleven such a gallant battle.

Georgetown held an edge at the end of the first half, thanks to the splendid line smashing of Ox Bordeau, hefty fullbacker, and some clever off tackle smashing by Halfback Donoghue, but in the second half, the Dukes held the upper hand. Bud Devenney, diminutive Duke quarterback, directed the play of the Dukes like a true champion. Sil Zananelli's punting was excellent.

When it is taken into consideration that three quarters of the game were played in a veritable morass, with rain and snow soaking the players to the skin, it is remarkable that there were not more fumbles and misplays. In fact, the boys did very well, very well, indeed.

HOYAS GET BREAK

Georgetown rushed over seven first downs in the first half. After that they were through. The Dukes gained three first and tens during the first two periods, and added six more in the third and fourth, which gave them an edge for the game of nine to seven.

The Hoyas got a break right at the start when King hurled a pass in the general direction of Capt. Ray Hudson, a Parnassus boy. Hudson didn't come within a mile of catching the heave, but the officials ruled interference and the Hoyas obtained possession of the pigskin on the Dukes' 20-yard line. The pass was good for exactly 30 yards. Bordeau ripped the line to the 15, but the Hoya offense drooped and the Dukes took the ball on downs.

And that was the furthest the Hilltoppers penetrated into Duke territory.

The Dukes gained a big break in the second period when on fourth down the Duquesne line broke through with such speed and drive that Skovinski, back to punt for the Hoyas, had to drop on the ball to keep from having it blocked and the Dukes took it on downs on the 41-yard line. They worked it to the 21, aided materially by a pass, DeLucca to Devenney, but the half ended before they could get any further.

DUKES SHOW POWER

Georgetown had to kick to start the second half, and afterward, they never had a chance. Right off the bat DeLucca whipped a pass to Devenney, good for 14 yards and a first down on the Georgetown 41 and although the running attack was trumped, Zananelli's fine booting kept the Hoyas back inside their own 31-yard line during the second half. Midway in the fourth period, Bordeau started what looked like a fine drive with a pip of an eight-yard slam off the weak side, but he fumbled when tackled and the Dukes took the ball on the 31.

DeLucca whammed a pass to Cristina for a 16-yard gain, putting his team on the Georgetown 15, first and 10, but again the running attack failed to click, and finally, little Red Sullivan, subbing at quarter for the tiring Devenney, dropped back to attempt a placement goal. DeLucca held the ball. The Georgetown line broke through and the kcik was very much n. g.

Georgetown gained 114 yards from rushing the ball, Duquesne 74. The Dukes completed five

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE TREE-CLIMBING GOATS OF MOROCCO—On the western coast of Morocco, where vegetation is comparatively scarce, the domestic goats sometimes are sorely pressed for food. Close examination of the larger branches of the argan trees of that district shows that the animals, for centuries wandering up and down, have worn actual runways in the trees. The goat has been a domesticated animal and an associate of man since the Stone Age, and, as there are many indications that the Berbers may be a very ancient people, the idea is permissible that this practice of herding goats in the argan trees may be one of the most ancient of their customs. MASTER OF A THOUSAND MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS—The Rev. F. W. Galpin, of Hatfield, Broad Oak, England, is the performer on a thousand intruments and owner of an extensive collection. He mastered such instruments as the mammoth bassoon, the buccin, the zummarah, the arghoul, the serpent, the rebec, the pibgorn and a host of others of grotesque shapes and bizarre names. Some of the instruments would cause a great deal of amusement if brought into a modern concert room. Others are either modern or ancient versions of our present-day instruments.

Because the rules of their church prohibit traveling on Sundays, members of the Geneva College Covenanter football squad, of Beaver Falls, coached by Howard Harpster, will stop over in New York tomorrow en route back home from Boston, where they play Boston University today . . . The squad will go from Boston to New York Saturday night and resume the homeward journey Monday morning . . . Mrs. Tommy Grant, of Rankin, wife of the boxing judge and timekeeper, is a native of Lonaconing, Md., and knew Lefty Grove when he was a barefoot boy in that town . . . Her maiden name was Oria Crichton, and she is acquainted with the entire Grove family.

Jimmy Johnston, new matchmaker for Madison Square Garden, New York, at a salary of $25,000 a year, plus a block of stock, came to this country from England and started boxing as a flyweight at the age of 15 . . . Five years later he turned manager as an assistant to Charley Harvey, veteran importer of European stars, at 4, in 1908, he became a manager on his own account . . . He has handled four world champions, Johnny Dundee, Ted (Kid) Lewis, Mike McTigue and Harry Greb, who among them acquired seven titles . . . He turned promoter in 1912 and in that year and 1913, 1914 and 1919 staged shows in the old Madison Square Garden, New York, paying a $1,000 nightly rental . . . In recent years, he has promoted big bouts in the New York baseball parks, among them the Tunney-Carpentier battle . . . This year he put the Garden to shame with his outdoor promotions at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, winding up with the Sharkey-Carnera bout of last Monday, and was so successful in a lean season that the Garden, his former enemy, has taken him into its camp in a desperate attempt to pull itself out of the red.

Young Jack Thompson already is on the scene in Boston for his 15-round battle in defense of the world welterweight title against Lou Brouillard, the southpaw, in Madison Square Garden next Friday night . . . Brouillard recently defeated Thompson in a 10-round non-title match over the weight there, and is being picked to repeat . . . Much as they would like to stage benefit football games for the unemployed, local college heads are being guided by experience in going slow about arranging any such contests . . . It is a fact that outstanding games have to be booked to lure the fans to the ticket booths, and at the end of a season these are so few and far between that they may be counted on the fingers of your hands—and that takes in the entire country.

Regarding the recent free-for-all fight between students of Wilkinsburg and Westinghouse High Schools before their football game, a reader, Edwin O. Johns, suggests that the school authorities take the matter into their own hands to prevent such scenes of disorder . . . His plan would be to have the thoughtless instigators expelled from school . . . He's right; there is neither rhyme nor reason in letting enthusiasm over a sporting game reach the point where the lives of individuals are endangered, and there's food for thought for the school heads in his suggestion. —HARRY KECK.

BOSTON, GENEVA GAME ASSURED

BOSTON, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Bowing before the protests of the Boston University football players for the second time in as many weeks, Dean Frederick Rand Rogers last night insured their scheduled appearance against Geneva here today by postponing the installation of his players' control system for another week.

Dr. Rogers, in charge of student health and physical education at Boston University, was located in Hibbing, Minn., where he had a speaking engagement. He was informed the football players had notified President Daniel J. Marsh that they would play Geneva only under duress if Head Coach Hilary Mahaney was not permitted to direct the team's play during the game.

A week ago, the Boston University players put on a similar demonstration when Dean Rogers attempted to put his player control system into effect in the game with George Washington University. The order was rescinded, and Coach Mahaney was permitted to supervise his team as it was defeated, 14-0.

During last night's long-distance conference with President Marsh, Dean Rogers intimated he would inaugurate player control on October 24, when Boston University journeys to Green Castle, Ind., to play De Pauw.

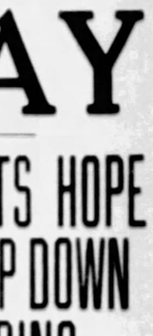
Western Reserve University's football squad, 32 strong, will arrive here in Pittsburgh this morning from Cleveland at 11:15 and spend the hours before the time of execution at the P. A. A., where they will have lunch, stare at the Cathedral of Larnin' and wish there were some way to play this game of football with the aid of an anesthetic.



K. E. Davis

Reserve and Pitt are to duel in the Pitt Stadium this afternoon in the city's lone collegiate offering. Carnegie Tech's Tartans are having a day off, and the Dukes played under the lights at Forbes Field last night. This morning, however, the freshman elevens of Pitt and Tech went to work on each other at the Tartan Bowl.

Reserve's hopes against Pitt this afternoon are entirely concerned in keeping the score down. The Red Cats are not in a class with the powerful Panthers, even though Dr. Jock Sutherland is starting a team composed almost entirely of second and third stringers. Only Johnny Luch, the pile-driving fullback of the varsity, will be in there at the kickoff.

DAVIS IN CHARGE

The Cleveland school, however, is building for the future, under the coaching direction of Tom Keady, former Lehigh and Quantico Marine mentor, and the astute business handling of K. E. Davis, former graduate manager of athletics here at Pitt.

The Pitt starting lineup, even though of reserve content, will outweigh that of Reserve. Coach Keady, looking to the future, is employing a flock of sophomore hopefuls. The Cats will be greatly

DISTRICT TEAMS FACE TESTS

Wash-Jeff, Geneva, West Virginia, Allegheny and Grove City face more or less rugged tests in grid tussle of interest in the tri-state sector today. The Pitt-Western Reserve fray in the Pitt Stadium is the only contest on tap in Pittsburgh proper, with Tech idle and the Dukes resting after their struggle with Georgetown last night.

Wash-Jeff meets Western Maryland at Baltimore in what appears to be a tough one for the Presidents. Western Maryland was socked mightily by Georgetown two weeks ago, but Dick Harlow has his squad back in trim and figures to give the Red and Black an afternoon of strenuous football.

Geneva takes on Boston University at Boston, the occasion being Geneva's third invasion of the Hub city. In previous games, the Covenanters met Harvard and Boston College.

West Virginia hopes to stage an impressive comeback after its rout here in the Pitt Stadium last week against Washington and Lee at Charleston, W. Va. The Mountaineers are the favorites, for Wash-Lee was decidedly unimpressive last week when kicked about by Kentucky.

Two feature tussles among the Class B elevens of the district bring Thiel and Allegheny together at Meadville and Grove City and Westminster at New Wilmington. Allegheny is undefeated and untied and out to capture the Class B championship. A win today will help the Gaitor cause considerable.

St. Francis meets Slippery Rock's Teachers at Johnstown tonight at Point Stadium under the lights. Clarion and Indiana go at Clarion and California plays host to Edinboro at California.

The Duquesne freshmen play Kiski at Saltsburg.

PITT GAME ON AIR

The Pitt-Notre Dame football game at South Bend, Ind., next Saturday will be broadcast by WJAS, it was announced today.

UNDEFEATED SCHOOL ELEVENS BATTLE TODAY

CLAIRTON HIGH, CHARLEROI ON EDGE

By JULIUS LEVIN

The field in the race for the W. P. I. A. L. football championship will be reduced considerably this afternoon when undefeated contenders for the title swing into action against powerful opponents.

Heading the day's program are the battles scheduled at Charleroi and Midland, both of which bring together undefeated elevens. The Charleroi-Clairton contest promises to draw a record-breaking crowd to the Charleroi baseball park while the Beaver Falls-Midland battle likewise will prove a magnet for the followers of scholastic football in the Beaver Valley.

Clairton, winner of three straight games and boasting a record that shows only one setback in more than five seasons, is invading Charleroi bent on repeating its victory of last year. Charleroi has a string of four straight triumphs. Both teams have been pointing for this game and will take the field in the best of physical condition.

BEAVER FALLS VS. MIDLAND

Clairton will present a powerful attack built around its 210-pound fullback, Ken Stilley, while the Steppers will rely on Chick Reeves, Johnny Hayduk, Kosolansky and Mahovlich.

The Beaver Falls-Midland tussle finds both teams unbeaten in four games. Both machines have been geared to perfection and the outcome is a toss-up.

Other important contests on the slate find Duquesne at Washington, Reynoldsville at Punxsutawney, Hurst at Greensburg, Braddock at East Pittsburgh, Carnegie at Stowe, Avalon at Swissvale, South Hills at Johnstown, Tarentum at Butler, Freedom at Ambridge, Monaca at Aliquippa, Latrobe at Connellsville, McKeesport at Norwin and Jeannette at Monessen.

In City League battles yesterday, Schenley pounded Taylor Allderdice for a 20-0 victory, thereby improving its own status in the fight for the sectional title. Westinghouse humiliated Fifth Avenue High 31 to 0, Peabody deadlocked South, 6 to 6, and Langley bowed before Oliver, 6 to 0.

The scheduled contest between Perry and Allegheny was called off by the principals of their respective schools as a reprisal for alleged damaging school property at Perry. A near-riot of youths followed the postponement and the situation today so far as football is concerned at both schools, is rather bleak.

NEW CASTLE COPS

The feature plays of the day were the 70-yard dash of Patrick for Schenley, who scored after intercepting a forward pass, and a 78-yard run by Sanford of the Bellefielders, after an off-tackle plunge.

In a non-league affray, Carrick High stepped on Shady Side Academy, 12 to 0. Rankin tripped Verona, 27 to 7. Beaver topped McDonald, 7 to 0. Mt. Lebanon took over South Fayette, 31-0. McKees Rocks swamped Coraopolis, 24-0. Central Catholic beat Duke Prep, 12-7, and Rankin blanked Arnold School, 12-0, in other important embroglios.

New Castle High ran roughshod over Woodward High, of Toledo, O., 38 to 0. New Kensington whitewashed Kittanning, 33-0.

out of eight passes good for 81 yards. Georgetown made two out of six for 36 yards.

NEW SUBSTITUTIONS

The Dukes got through the game with only six subs, while Georgetown employed only five. Something unusual for both teams.

Elmer Layden used Nicolosi, a tackle at right end in the place of the two injured terminals, Krankota and Abele. The big fellow performed very well and may be used at a wing position from now on. His defensive play left little to be desired. The line-up:

Duquesne		Georgetown

Rokus	L. T.	Bellmore
Antoni	L. G.	Cronin
Greene	C.	Weinert
Weinberg	R. G.	Hanley

Tringale	R. E.	Abele
Terranova (c)	Q.	Dohrmann
DeLorca	L. H.	Lautenberg

Substitutions: Duquesne, Lacock, Conner, Trombetta, Baker, Hoffman, Frank, Testa, Boarman, Lupo, E. Krankota, Al. Gerson, Tremblay, J. Krankota.

Officials: Referee, M. H. Sweet, Princeton; umpire, C. O. Keller, Bucknell; field judge, E. Hollenback, Lieseman, Villanova.

MY LIFE STORY

Hero of 1931 World Series

SIXTH AND FINAL CHAPTER.

I got the breaks right away in the recent world series because Grove and Earnshaw hadn't heard much about me, and, when I got up to the plate, especially in the first game, Grove didn't do any bearing down on me as he did on Jim Bottomley, Chick Hafey and the others.

You see, I was just a rookie outfielder and those pro pitchers didn't expect me to bang any baseballs around, and they didn't begin working hard on me until about the third game, when they figured it out that either I was a pretty good natural hitter or that I was in a lucky streak and, no matter which it was, I had to be stopped.

After that, they got serious with me, but I was lucky during the next three games. During the last two I never did see such speed as Grove and Earnshaw used on me. They just blazed that ball at me and she whistled like an engine tooting through the plains out in Oklahoma.

OUTWITS COCHRANE

All the time I have been playing professional baseball I have noticed that the surest way to put a team up in the air is to do some base-stealing. I guess it wasn't that way up to 10 years ago when they didn't have the lively ball, but since they put the "rabbit" into the game most of the boys have been saving their legs by knocking out home runs.

I heard all about how great a catcher Mickey Cochrane was, but I looked up his record and I noticed a couple of things. One was that he wasn't throwing out many runners and the second was that no one was doing much stealing on him.

Right away I said to myself that no one was trying to do much base-stealing in the American League and Cochrane's arm must be rusty and his aim couldn't be much good. So when I got on the first time I decided I would see how good a thrower he was and I hoofed it for second. Just as I thought, Mickey's throw wasn't good.

NOT AFTER RECORDS

When I stole third on him later it was because his throwing wasn't good either and those two sacks I grabbed that way got the A's pretty much upset. Nothing gets a team up in the air higher than when you run the bases wild and Gabby Street gives us orders to run any time you get a chance, and we surely did.

Our team is one that plays to win ball games and we don't go trying to hang up records by players. A lot of you kind folks were hoping I'd get the thirteenth hit and I would have liked to, but it doesn't matter that I didn't because I got 12 and they were all my team needed from me.

If I had got five hits in the sixth game, which is the one in which we were beaten 8 to 1, it wouldn't have won for us and in the last game, the other boys were doing enough hitting so they didn't need me to pound around any apples.

PLAYS TO WIN

All way we played like that. We all were trying all of the time, and when one or two of us were in a slump, the others did enough to make up for us. And we kept right on doing it in the series, all of us trying all of the time. When some of the other boys weren't hitting in the early games, I was lucky enough to be cracking them out, and when Grove and Earnshaw finally got me tamed, why Hish and Watkins soaked out a couple of hits apiece and won the game.

No, folks, I am not a hero. I am just a ball player trying all of the time. I have been trying for 10 years, and that's why I got a chance with the Cards and got into the series and had that run of luck.

RULE FOR SUCCESS

People have asked me how to be a success at baseball and that is a great compliment, because I am not sure I am a success yet, but when they ask me I say, "Just keep on trying and trying, and don't ever quit, no matter how tough things get, but just try harder."

THE END.

WALLACE OLD BUTCH FOE

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor

Frankie Wallace, of Cleveland, who makes his local boxing bow at Motor Square Garden Monday night against Jackie Rodgers in the 10-round main bout, is no stranger to at least one Pittsburgher, the same being Mose Butch, the Oakland southpaw who defeated Rodgers the latter's last time out, at Hickey Park, Millvale.

Frankie Wallace

Wallace, whose real name is Frank Angeloro, and who will not be 19 years old until next January, arrived in town late yesterday to reveal his acquaintance with Butch, whom he boxed three times in National amateur tournaments. Their first clash was in the National A. A. U. senior tourney in Boston in 1928, and he lost the decision to Butch. Two months later he defeated Mose in the National junior tournament in Chicago, and went on to win the laurels. The following year he was not eligible for the juniors, as a previous winner, and Butch annexed the crown and then turned pro. However, meanwhile Butch and Wallace had clashed again, in the seniors in Boston, and Frankie grabbed off the award, which makes him one up on Mose, with two decisions in his favor and only one against him.

Frankie got into the boxing racket as an admirer of Billy Wallace, former Cleveland ring idol. He followed Billy everywhere and when he decided to become a boxer asked Billy if he could use the latter's surname instead of his own, and was tickled pink when Billy told him to go ahead, with his best wishes. In his most recent start, Wallace defeated Johnny Datto at Cleveland, a week ago last Monday night. He boxes Hymie Wiseman in Chicago next Friday night.

Between Rounds

Matchmaker Jules Beck has completed the card for his show Monday night. The preliminaries consist of two eight-round bouts and a six-rounder. Charles Baxter and Johnny Dunn are in the semi-final and Young Rudy and Johnny Cooper, of Cincinnati, box the other eight-rounder with Arnold Green and Johnny Dembo in the opener.

Billy Flanagan, of Braddock, managed by Frank Klaus, wants to bat Rock McTiernan and there is talk of this match being arranged as the opening feature at the Motor Temple.

Promoter Jim McGirr doubled his gate receipts by slashing his prices in half for his Bathing Girls-Jackie Dugan show last Thursday night and will continue this policy. He has Eddie Brannon in the main bout next Thursday against Lou Petrone, of Erie, who has toured Frankie Baloraski, Steve Halahan, Benny McArthur, Louie Severn and Andy Callahan, among others.

Patsy Petergal, of Dubois, a lightweight, who has boxed Mickey Doyle, Phil Verdi and others in Bradford, Williamsport, Dubois, Rochester, N. Y., and Buffalo, is in town and training for bouts. He will box under the management of Mike DeRosa, Jr.

Murphy, Former Cub Owner, Dies of Stroke

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—(AP.)—Charles Webb Murphy, former owner of the Chicago National League Baseball Club, died at his home here yesterday, victim of a stroke. He was 63 years old.

Murphy, one of the most picturesque figures baseball ever produced, owned the Cubs during the managerial regime of the late Frank L. Chance, the famed Peerless Leader. During Murphy's eight-year reign as owner, the Cubs won two world championships, in 1907 and 1908; four National League titles, finished second twice and third in the other two seasons.

Ernst's Memories Fail to Check With Reality

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Adele, as she dances, carries her head tilted backward a little. One hand is on the dark fellow's shoulder. As I catch a glimpse of her face from the side, my breath catches, so like is she under the shaded lights of the ballroom to my memory of those evenings of before the war. But from the front her face is fuller, and when she laughs it sounds quite strange to me.

I take a long pull from Willy's bottle. The little seamstress is just dancing by. She is slimmer and neater than Adele.

The waltz is over. Adele is leaning against the door. I go over to her. She greets me and goes on talking and laughing with her dark haired chap. I stand there and look at her. My heart is beating fast, as if I were about to make a great decision.

"What are you looking at me like that for?" she asks.

"Oh, nothing," I say. "What about a dance?"

"Not this, the next one," she answers and goes off with her partner to the dance floor.

I wait for her and we dance a Boston together. I do my utmost and she smiles appreciatively.

"You learned to dance at the Front, of course."

"Not there, exactly," I answer. "But we won a prize just now."

She looks up quickly. "Oh! What a pity; we might have done that together—What was it?"

ADELE CHANGED

"Six gulls' eggs and a medal," I reply and the color mounts into my hair. The violins are playing so softly that the shuffle of many footsteps can be heard.

"Anyway, we're dancing together now," I say. "Do you remember the evenings when we used to race along here, one after the other, from the Gym Club?"

She nods. "Yes, we were rather childish in those days. But just look over there! The girl with the red dress—those loose blouses are the latest thing. Chic, don't you think?"

The violins relinquish the melody to the 'cello. Tremulous, like suppressed weeping, they quiver above the golden-brown tones.

"The first time I spoke to you we both ran away," I say. "June it was, on the old wall of the town—I remember it as if it were yesterday—"

Adele is waving to some one. Now she turns to me again.

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted when a schoolboy, tells the post-war story of a group of friends from the same city who return when peace is made, to find a strange new world in which they seem to have no place. The problems of making a living and of adjusting themselves to conditions appear at first insoluble. Ernst, feeling like a stranger in his home town, catches a glimpse of Adele, whom he knew before the war, and talks with her. Instantly life seems to have recaptured a former glamour. The boy goes to a dance hall which he is told Adele frequents. Willy is there in gala attire. Albert Trosske is with a fair-headed girl, whom Ernst does not know. In a dancing competition Ernst and his partner, a little seamstress, win a prize. Then he catches sight of Adele, who has just arrived.

Now Go On

"Yes, weren't we silly?—And can you really dance the tango? The dark boy over there is a gorgeous tango dancer!"

I do not reply. The music is silent. "Would you care to come to our table for a bit?" I ask.

She looks across. "Who's the slim boy with the patent-leather shoes?"

"Karl Broger," I reply. She sits down with us. Willy offers her a glass and makes some joke or other. She laughs and looks across at Karl. Off and on she shoots a glance at Karl's sleigh horse—that is the girl with the latest fashioned blouse. I observe her in astonishment. She is so changed. Has memory played me false here too, then? Did it grow and grow too, until it has outgrown the reality?—This rather loud girl sitting here at the table and talking much too much is a stranger to me. But concealed under that manner must there not be perhaps some one that I do not know better? Does a thing become so distorted then, just because one gets older?—Perhaps it is the year, I say to myself. It is more than three years now—she was 16 then and, a child; now she is 19 and grown up. And suddenly I am conscious of the nameless sadness of Time that runs and runs on and changes, and when a man returns he shall find nothing again.—Yes, it is a hard thing to part; but to come back again, that is sometimes far harder.

"What are you making such a long face about, Ernst?" asks Willy.

"He is dull, isn't he?" says Adele, laughing. "But then, he was always like that. Why don't you be a bit frisky, Ernst? The girls like that much better than sitting around like a sad pudding."

So that is over, think I to myself; so that is over, too! Not because she thinks me dull; not because she has altered—no, not for any of these things, but because I see now that it has all been in vain—I have been running about and about; I have knocked again at all the doors of my youth and desired to enter in there; I thought, surely it must admit me again, for I am still young and have wished so much to forget; but it fled always before me like a will-o'-the-wisp; it fell away without sound; it crumbled like tinder at my lightest touch. And I could not understand. Surely here at least something of it must remain? I attempted it again and again, and as a result made myself merely ridiculous and wretched.—But now I know, I know now that a still, silent war has ravaged this country of my memories also; I know now that it would be useless for me to look farther. Time lies between like a great gulf; I cannot get back. There is nothing for it; I must go forward, march onward, anywhere; it matters nothing, for I have no goal.

SENTIMENTAL

I grip my schnapps glass tightly and look up. Yes, there is Adele still questioning Karl as to where one may best buy smuggled silk stockings.—The dance goes on as before; the orchestra is still playing the same waltz from the "House of the Three Maidens"—and here I sit, too, just as before, on the same chair, and I breathe and am alive still. Was there no flash of lightning then that tore me away? Did no country suddenly founder and go down about me, leaving me only surviving, all else this moment perished and lost to me for ever?

Adele gets up and takes leave of Karl. "At Meyer and Nickel's then?" she says pleasantly. "You're sure? They do deal on the quiet in all sorts of oddments? Then I'll go along there the first thing in the morning. Goodbye, Ernst!"

"I'll come with you a little way," I answer.

Outside she shakes hands. "You mustn't come any farther; I'm being waited for here."

I know it is foolish and sentimental, but I cannot help it; I take off my cap and bow low to her, as if to take a long farewell—not from her, but from all the things that were before. She looks at me searchingly a moment. "You are really quite funny sometimes!" Humming, she runs down the path.

The clouds have gone and night is standing clear over the town. For a long time I stand looking at it. Then I go back.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Folly

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Girl Avenges Society Snob At Costume Ball

Emmy Nash was a quiet little girl at high school.

She was liked well enough, but never the sort to be taken over into any particular crowd.

Emmy's people were far from affluent, while many of the young people of the school had parents who afforded them sporty clothes and runabout cars.

Most of them thought none the less of Emmy for this. They understood the situation, knew that she did not have the sort of a home suitable for entertaining them, could not play about with little roadsters or dress suitably for their own parties.

Quite a number of the boys liked Emmy because she was pretty and, when one became acquainted with her, quite jolly.

Marge Thornton, however, was the big exception, in that she took every occasion to be rather snooty to Emmy. Many of the young people knew that while Emmy's people were poor, they were hard-working and honest and paid their bills. They also knew that Marge's people were forever living beyond their income—the far too common variety of family that, as we used to say in the pre-Volstead days, "Tries to buy champagne on a beer income."

If Emmy cared she did not show it. And Marge Thornton only lost prestige by forever snubbing Emmy or making fun of her somewhat out-of-date clothes.

When Bert Jameson came to our town to open a new automobile agency Emmy had left high school. This was in her third year. She was working for Mrs. Sutton, who owned our town's sole beauty parlor.

EMMY EXTREMELY HAPPY

Marge was supposed to be "abroad." Some of us knew that she was simply up country living on her grandmother's little farm.

At any rate, Bert Jameson seemed to take a liking to Emmy. This was Emmy's first real beau. She had plenty of friends among our young fellows in school, but no real sweethearts. Bert was a few years older than any of the high school boys. He was good looking, flashily dressed and, coming from a big city, had what would now be called a "clever line."

Emmy seemed to be extremely happy to have Bert beau her around and all went well until Marge returned to her last year in high.

"Father thinks I ought to have a new car," she announced.

Almost everyone in town except Bert knew that the little car she had then wasn't yet paid for.

However, this was one way of becoming acquainted. Before so very long Bert was neglecting Emmy Nash a great deal and going out with Marge.

Emmy continued with her daily work at the beauty parlor. A few of us knew that she was hurt in more ways than one—she had become wrapped up in Bert and to lose him surely hurt, also her pride was hurt.

BREAKS ENGAGEMENT

After a while Bert ceased paying attention to Emmy at all.

Emmy continued to shampoo and finger wave, marcel, and otherwise temporarily beautify the patrons of Mrs. Sutton's clients.

Bert became infatuated with Marge, not only because she had a flashy sort of beauty and a saucy line of talk, but because he believed that the bluff of riches her family put up betokened genuine wealth. To Bert this seemed a great catch, a vivacious, pretty girl from a wealthy family!

Emmy sent back to Bert the little engagement ring. He exchanged it for a more costly one, adding many of his hard-earned dollars. Marge sported the ring gaily.

She went into Mrs. Sutton's one day for a marcel. Emmy waited on her. Marge flashed the ring, mentioned that Bert wanted to get her a better one and added, "Fix me up pretty, I'm going with Bert for a weekend with some awfully swell people."

Emmy smiled at Marge and did an excellent job.

And then J. Montrose Walton came to town. J. Montrose Walton merely came there to oversee the building of a summer place on Rainbow Lake.

Young Walton—although some six years older than Marge—was known by reputation, or by his family's reputation. They were not only blessed with plenty of millions, but ranked high, socially, "in the book."

Marge and her people made every effort to bring about a match. Here was the solution to their problem of bluffing riches—if Marge could land Mr. Walton there would be the riches!

And so it became Marge's turn to give an engagement ring back to Bert Jameson. But, as I easily found out, she was diplomatic about it.

"It isn't my fault," she told him, with well-stimulated sobs, "my people will kill me, just about, if I refuse him. But I'll always love you, Bert—we'll always love each other."

BUYS COSTLY AUTO

There was quite a flurry, socially, when Marge Thornton became Mrs. J. Montrose Walton.

And then Bert made an effort to become reconciled with Emmy Nash. He told her that it had all been a mistake. Emmy agreed, a mistake on his part that was too late to rectify.

The following summer Marge returned. The Walton summer home on Rainbow lake had been completed. It was one of the most attractive of the two score there that made up the famous so-called "Millionaire Summer Colony."

Marge dropped in at Bert's place and bought herself a costly car, paying cash for it. And she got Bert to show her how to handle this new one.

On these "lesson trips" Marge made it plain to Bert that she really continued to love him. Bert had no means of knowing that during the past winter she had made certain others believe the same. This was like Marge—she was a natural feminine philanderer.

It became the old story—Walton and his people were about the only ones who did not know that Marge and Bert were forming the two sinful sides to the old triangle.

When Marge's mother-in-law came on for the balance of the season she had to watch her step. This made matters all the more interesting to Marge—it gave a tang of danger to her secret meetings with Bert Jameson.

Marge loved to patronize the local beauty shop. Emmy Nash was still working there. It gave Marge a kick to flutter in, wearing the newest and best of clothes and sporting plenty of jewels, and have Emmy give her a facial.

"Just worn out with my social duties," she would say. Emmy was always sweet to her. And for that reason Marge took Emmy into her confidence a great deal.

"I'll give you a hundred dollars," Marge offered Emmy, "if you will go to the masked costume ball at the Rainbow Lake Club house, and wear a costume of Folly that I will provide."

"Why?" Emmy asked.

"Because I can't get out of sight of Monty's snooping old mother and I have a date for that night. You go there in the costume, masked. You slip out to the back of the big club garage at eleven-thirty. I'll appear and go in and you disappear."

Emmy thought it over and agreed.

Marge delivered the Folly costume to Emmy, a duplicate of her own. She went to the ball with her mother-in-law, she disappeared soon after to the dark rear of the big garage, where Emmy was waiting in her costume. Marge faded into the darkness, where Bert was waiting in a car. Emmy went into the club and proceeded to enjoy herself for a while.

At 11:30 "Folly" tried to dance and fell down a couple of times, apparently too full of liquor to stand. The strap of her gown became loosened and there was much daring exposure. When some one tried to help her up she cursed them thickly through the mask, and it was mightly vile profanity.

Then she cried, "The hell with you cheap skates, I'm going out and meet my real sweetheart!"

Before anyone could stop her, Emmy disappeared.

Marge arrived on time, whispered "Thanks," slipped the hundred dollars into Emmy's hand and entered the great pavilion.

GREATLY RELIEVED

They were unmasking. Everyone was eager to see who Folly could be. Monty Walton's mother had gone home just before this, disgusted and disgraced, believing that the "drunken Folly" was Marge.

Marge made the mistake of "explaining" to her husband that she had become ill suddenly and got Emmy Nash to double for her.

Monty Walton wasn't such a fool as to think that two Folly costumes had been prepared for such an emergency. He went right over and found Emmy at her home, quite sober. She calmly confessed and told him to do his worst, she didn't care.

Monty began to laugh. He was greatly relieved to be able to divorce Marge and he was just as greatly delighted at Emmy's little revenge—so pleased, in fact, that he set Emmy up in business for herself in a wonderfully equipped beauty shop.

The name of the shop is simply "Emmy's."

Only a few of us know why there is a picture on each great front window, beneath the name, of a girl sitting at a make-up table, and the girl wears the costume of "Folly."

THE ROAD BACK -:- By E

Ernst's Memories Fail to Check With Reality

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Adele, as she dances, carries her head tilted backward a little. One hand is on the dark fellow's shoulder. As I catch a glimpse of her face from the side, my breath catches, so like is she under the shaded lights of the ballroom to my memory of those evenings of before the war. But from the front her face is fuller, and when she laughs it sounds quite strange to me.

I take a long pull from Willy's bottle. The little seamstress is just dancing by. She is slimmer and neater than Adele.

The waltz is over. Adele is leaning against the door. I go over to her. She greets me and goes on talking and laughing with her dark haired chap. I stand there and look at her. My heart is beating fast, as if I were about to make a great decision.

"What are you looking at me like that for?" she asks.

"Oh, nothing." I say. "What about a dance?"

"Not this, the next one," she answers and goes off with her partner to the dance floor.

I wait for her and we dance a Boston together. I do my utmost and she smiles appreciatively.

"You learned to dance at the Front, of course."

"Not there, exactly," I answer. "But we won a prize just now."

She looks up quickly. "Oh! What a pity; we might have done that together—What was it?"

ADELE CHANGED

"Six gulls eggs and a medal," I reply and the color mounts into my hair. The violins are playing so softly that the shuffle of many footsteps can be heard.

"Anyway, we're dancing together now," I say. "Do you remember the evenings when we used to race along here, one after the other, from the Gym Club?"

She nods. "Yes, we were rather childish in those days. But just look over there! The girl with the red dress—those loose blouses are the latest thing. Chic, don't you think?"

The violins relinquish the melody to the 'cello. Tremulous, like suppressed weeping, they quiver above the golden-brown tones.

"The first time I spoke to you we both ran away," I say. "June it was, on the old wall of the town—I remember it as if it were yesterday—"

Adele is waving to some one. Now she turns to me again.

"Yes, weren't we silly?—And can you really dance the tango? The dark boy over there is a gorgeous tango dancer!"

I do not reply. The music is silent. "Would you care to come to our table for a bit?" I ask.

She looks across. "Who's the slim boy with the patent-leather shoes?"

"Karl Broger," I reply. She sits down with us. Willy offers her a glass and makes some joke or other. She laughs and looks across at Karl. Off and on she shoots a glance at Karl's sleigh horse—that is the girl with the latest fashioned blouse. I observe her in astonishment; she is so changed. Has memory played me false here too, then? Did it grow and grow, too, until it has outgrown the realities?—This rather loud girl sitting here at the table and talking much too much is a stranger to me. But concealed under that manner must there not be, perhaps some one that I do not know, better? Does a thing become so distorted just because one gets—Perhaps it is the years to myself. It is three years now—since then and, a child, 19 and grown up. Suddenly I am conscious of nameless sadness and runs and runs on and when a man returns he shall find nothing again.—Yes, it is a hard thing to part; but to come back again, that is sometimes far harder.

"What are you making such a long face about, Ernst?" asks Willy.

"He is dull, isn't he?" says Adele, laughing. "But then, he was always like that. Why don't you be a bit frisky, Ernst? The girls like that much better than sitting around like a sad pudding."

So that is over, think I to myself, so that is over, too! Not because she thinks me dull; not because she has altered—no, not for any of these things, but because I see now that it has all been in vain. I have been running about and about; I have knocked again at all the doors of my youth and desired to enter in there. I thought surely it must admit me again, for I am still young and have wished so much to forget, but it fled always before me like a will-o'-the-wisp. It fell away without sound, it crumbled like tinder at my lightest touch. And I could not understand. Surely here at least something of it must remain? I attempted it again and again, and as a result made myself merely ridiculous and wretched.—But now I know. I know now that a still, silent war has ravaged this country of my memories also; I know now that it would be useless for me to look farther. Time lies between like a great schnapps glass [illegible] and look up. Yes, there is Adele still questioning Karl as to where one may best buy smuggled silk stockings.—The dance goes on as before; the orchestra is still playing the same waltz from the "House of the Three Maidens"—and here I sit, too, just as before, on the same chair, and I breathe and am alive still. Was there no flash of lightning then that tore me away? Did no country suddenly founder and go down about me, leaving me only surviving, all else this moment perished and lost to me for ever?

Adele gets up and takes leave of Karl. "At Meyer and Nickel's then?" she says pleasantly. "You're sure? They do deal on the quiet in all sorts of oddments? Then I'll go along there the first thing in the morning. Goodbye, Ernst!"

"I'll come with you a little way," I answer.

Outside she shakes hands. "You mustn't come any farther; I'm being waited for here."

I know it is foolish and sentimental, but I cannot help it; I take off my cap and bow low to her, as if to take a long farewell—not from her, but from all the things that were before. She looks at me searchingly a moment. "You are really quite funny sometimes!" Humming, she runs down the path.

The clouds have gone and night is standing clear over the town. For a long time I stand looking at it. Then I go back.

Synopsis

Ernst, who enlisted when a schoolboy, tells the post-war story of a group of friends from the same city who return when peace is made, to find a strange new world in which they seem to have no place. The problems of making a living and of adjusting themselves to conditions appear at first insoluble. Ernst, feeling like a stranger in his home town, catches a glimpse of Adele, whom he knew before the war, and talks with her. Instantly life seems to have recaptured a former glamour. The boy goes to a dance hall which he is told Adele frequents. Willy is there in gala attire. Albert Trosske is with a fair-headed girl, whom Ernst does not know. In a dancing competition Ernst and his partner, a little seamstress, win a prize. Then he catches sight of Adele, who has just arrived.

One of life's little ironies is that when our friend needs us we are on hand but when we need our friend he is on foot—and often running in the opposite direction.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Girl Avenges Society Snob At Costume Ball

Folly

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Emmy Nash was a quiet little girl at high school.

She was liked well enough, but never the sort to be taken over into any particular crowd.

Emmy's people were far from affluent, while many of the young people of the school had parents who afforded them sporty clothes and runabout cars.

Most of them thought none the less of Emmy for this. They understood the situation, knew that she did not have the sort of a home suitable for entertaining them, could not play about with little roadsters or dress suitably for their own parties.

Quite a number of the boys liked Emmy because she was pretty and, when one became acquainted with her, quite jolly.

Marge Thornton, however, was the big exception, in that she took every occasion to be rather snooty to Emmy. Many of the young people knew that while Emmy's people were poor, they were hard-working and honest and paid their bills. They also knew that Marge's people were forever living beyond their income—the far too common variety of family that, as we used to say in the pre-Volstead days, "Tries to buy champagne on a beer income."

If Emmy cared she did not show it. And Marge Thornton only lost prestige by forever snubbing Emmy or making fun of her somewhat out-of-date clothes.

When Bert Jameson came to our town to open a new automobile agency Emmy had left high school. This was in her third year. She was working for Mrs. Sutton, who owned our town's sole beauty parlor.

EMMY EXTREMELY HAPPY

Marge was supposed to be "abroad." Some of us knew that she was simply up country living on her grandmother's little farm.

At any rate, Bert Jameson seemed to take a liking to Emmy. This was Emmy's first real beau. She had plenty of friends among our young fellows in school, but no real sweethearts. Bert was a few years older than any of the high school boys. He was good looking, flashily dressed and, coming from a big city, had what would now be called a "clever line."

Emmy seemed to be extremely happy to have Bert beau her around and all went well until Marge returned to her last year in high.

"Father thinks I ought to have a new car," she announced.

Almost everyone in town except Bert knew that the little car she had then wasn't yet paid for.

However, this was one way of becoming acquainted. Before so very long Bert was neglecting Emmy Nash a great deal and going out with Marge.

Emmy continued with her daily work at the beauty parlor. A few of us knew that she was hurt in more ways than one—she had become wrapped up in Bert and to lose him surely hurt, also her pride was hurt.

BREAKS ENGAGEMENT

After a while Bert ceased paying attention to Emmy at all.

Emmy continued to shampoo and finger wave, marcel, and otherwise temporarily beautify the patrons of Mrs. Sutton's clients.

Bert became infatuated with Marge, not only because she had a flashy sort of beauty and a saucy line of talk, but because he believed that the bluff of riches her family put up betokened genuine wealth. To Bert this seemed a great catch, a vivacious, pretty girl from a wealthy family!

Emmy sent back to Bert the little engagement ring. He exchanged it for a more costly one, adding many of his hard-earned dollars. Marge sported the ring gaily.

She went into Mrs. Sutton's one day for a marcel. Emmy waited on her. Marge flashed the ring, mentioned that Bert wanted to get her a better one and added, "Fix me up pretty, I'm going with Bert for a week-end with some awfully swell people."

Emmy smiled at Marge and did an excellent job.

And then J. Montrose Walton came to town. J. Montrose Walton merely came there to oversee the building of a summer place on Rainbow Lake.

Young Walton—although some six years older than Marge—was known by reputation, or by his family's reputation. They were not only blessed with plenty of millions, but ranked high, socially, "in the book."

Marge and her people made every effort to bring about a match. Here was the solution to their problem of bluffing riches—if Marge could land Mr. Walton there would be the riches!

And so it became Marge's turn to give an engagement ring back to Bert Jameson. But, as I easily found out, she was diplomatic about it.

"It isn't my fault," she told him, with well-stimulated sobs, "my people will kill me, just about, if I refuse him. But I'll always love you, Bert—we'll always love each other."

BUYS COSTLY AUTO

There was quite a flurry, socially, when Marge Thornton became Mrs. J. Montrose Walton.

And then Bert made an effort to become reconciled with Emmy Nash. He told her that it had all been a mistake. Emmy agreed, a mistake on his part that was too late to rectify.

The following summer Marge returned. The Walton summer home on Rainbow lake had been completed. It was one of the most attractive of the two score there that made up the famous so-called "Millionaire Summer Colony."

Marge dropped in at Bert's place and bought herself a costly car, paying cash for it. And she got Bert to show her how to handle this new one.

On these "lesson trips" Marge made it plain to Bert that she really continued to love him. Bert had no means of knowing that during the past winter she had made certain others believe the same. This was like Marge—she was a natural feminine philanderer.

It became the old story—Walton and his people were about the only ones who did not know that Marge and Bert were forming the two sinful sides to the old triangle.

When Marge's mother-in-law came on for the balance of the season she had to watch her step. This made matters all the more interesting to Marge—it gave a tang of danger to her secret meetings with Bert Jameson.

Marge loved to patronize the local beauty shop. Emmy Nash was still working there. It gave Marge a kick to flutter in, wearing the newest and best of clothes and sporting plenty of jewels, and have Emmy give her a facial.

"Just worn out with my social duties," she would say. Emmy was always sweet to her. And for that reason Marge took Emmy into her confidence a great deal.

"I'll give you a hundred dollars," Marge offered Emmy, "if you will go to the masked costume ball at the Rainbow Lake Club house, and wear a costume of Folly that I will provide."

"Why?" Emmy asked.

"Because I can't get out of sight of Monty's snooping old mother and I have a date for that night. You go there in the costume, masked. You slip out to the back of the big club garage at eleven-thirty. I'll appear and go in and you disappear.

Emmy thought it over and agreed.

Marge delivered the Folly costume to Emmy, a duplicate of her own. She went to the ball with her mother-in-law, she disappeared soon after to the dark rear of the big garage, where Emmy was waiting in her costume. Marge faded into the darkness, where Bert was waiting in a car. Emmy went into the club and proceeded to enjoy herself for a while.

At 11:30 "Folly" tried to dance and fell down a couple of times, apparently too full of liquor to stand. The strap of her gown became loosened and there was much daring exposure. When some one tried to help her up she cursed them thickly through the mask, and it was mightly vile profanity.

Then she cried, "The hell with you cheap skates, I'm going out and meet my real sweetheart!"

Before anyone could stop her, Emmy disappeared.

Marge arrived on time, whispered "Thanks," slipped the hundred dollars into Emmy's hand and entered the great pavilion.

GREATLY RELIEVED

They were unmasking. Everyone was eager to see who Folly could be. Monty Walton's mother had gone home just before this, disgusted and disgraced, believing that the "drunken Folly" was Marge.

Marge made the mistake of "explaining" to her husband that she had become ill suddenly and got Emmy Nash to double for her.

Monty Walton wasn't such a fool as to think that two Folly costumes had been prepared for such an emergency. He went right over and found Emmy at her home, quite sober. She calmly confessed and told him to do his worst, she didn't care.

Monty began to laugh. He was greatly relieved to be able to divorce Marge and he was just as greatly delighted at Emmy's little revenge—so pleased, in fact, that he set Emmy up in business for herself in a wonderfully equipped beauty shop.

The name of the shop is simply "Emmy's."

Only a few of us know why there is a picture on each great front window, beneath the name, of a girl sitting at a make-up table, and the girl wears the costume of "Folly."

A Mine Safety Record

The Industrial Depression Has Helped to Prevent Accidents, Comment on Local News.

The Department of Mines calls attention to the fact that not since March 21, 1929, when the Kinloch mine disaster at Parnassus destroyed 46 lives, has a major disaster occurred in Pennsylvania bituminous mines. This breaks all mine safety records of the last 36 years. Unfortunately the absence of accidents has been largely due to the industrial depression.

*H. M. Faust, Ohio State University research en-*gineer, sees the possibility of a serious coal shortage this winter. He says in a current periodical that coal stocks on hand are small and it may be difficult to obtain a large increase in tonnage from the mines on short notice. The question is thus raised if the operators have carried their inactivity to an unwarranted extreme.

There is no blinking the fact that unless there is a marked increase in mining activities thousands of Allegheny County miners will be in a bad way this winter. This makes it important that in the relief drive soon to start citizens contribute $3,000,000 for the Emergency Association as well as the $2,981,184 asked for the regular social service agencies.

Thanks to the Department of Labor and Industry the Legislature will not be without comprehensive and definite facts when it meets in special session on November 9 to consider relief measures. A report on the unemployment situation issued by the department yesterday listed the worst counties. It is gratifying to note that Allegheny County is not among them.

*There is food for thought not only in the unem-*ployment figures but also in the payroll figures issued by the Department of Labor and Industry. Employes of Pennsylvania manufacturing establishments are now receiving a total of about $16,000,000 a week in wages, as against $26,750,000 in 1929. It would be interesting to know to what extent the drop is due to wage cuts.

William E. Best, of Pittsburgh, who is president of the United States Building and Loan League, said in a speech at Fairmont, W. Va., Thursday night that this is a splendid time to invest in a home. Certainly it costs less to construct or purchase one now than it did a few years ago. And a home is an investment that is more stable than Wall street security prices.

It is gratifying to see another Allegheny County borough taking advantage of low prices for materials and the abundance of labor to make a needed improvement. The people of Glenfield, who have voted down, every time it was proposed during the last 30 years, the suggestion that they install a water and sewer system, approved the proposal Thursday.

Louis Alpern, candidate for county commissioner on the Liberal ticket, announces that if elected he will do all in his power to put the Town Hall downtown or on the North Side. What a relief it will be to have this vexatious question finally settled and the Town Hall built! It is to be hoped the project will not drag along for years as the new postoffice did.

With friction between Col. McGovern and Senator Mansfield coming into evidence, and with hot fights already under way in a number of the wards, the November election campaign promises to be a little more spirited than is usual in an off year. Thanks to the grand jury, the election probably will be conducted more honestly than the primary was.

The trouble that was experienced with voting machines in the primary election was largely due, in the opinion of Richard Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, to the voters' want of familiarity with the device. Everyone should avail himself of the opportunity to learn how to work the machines. They will be demonstrated in the Sixth, Seventh and Tenth wards next week.

Hard times, with its appeal to the charitable, makes the ground fertile for the growth of all kinds of questionable schemes for raising money for the poor. Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Public Welfare, is doing a useful service in investigating these projects. Impostors who use charity as a cloak for swindling are particularly despicable.

*The University of Pittsburgh is setting a com-*mendable example in arranging to donate to the Allegheny County Emergency Association, for the benefit of the unemployed, the receipts from the dance that is to be given for the West Point cadets who come to Pittsburgh November 14 for the Pitt-Army football game. A large sum should be realized.

*In connection with the efforts to aid the unem-*ployed it is interesting to note that the cost of financing the welfare drive this year will be far less than formerly. When the Welfare Fund was formed in 1928, with 25 agencies, the cost was 6.5 per cent. This year, the budget committee says, the cost will be reduced to less than 2 per cent.

Football games for the benefit of the unemployed are praisworthy. But it is to be hoped that the games yet to be played in Pittsburgh, whether for charity or not, will be attended with less riotous enthusiasm than has marked the preparations for some of the interscholastic contests lately. One "pep" meeting resulted in the calling out of the fire department.

*Some of the students are showing as much en-*thusiasm and loyalty for their schools, in preparation for the football games, as might be shown for their country in the event of an outbreak of war. By the way, the Japanese general, Kiokatsu Sato, declares in a book to be published in the March of Events Section of the Sun-Telegraph, beginning Sunday, that war between the United States and Japan is inevitable.

Gen. Sato says in his book, "Our Imperial Nation's Crisis: the Coming Japanese-American War," that Americans are "inhuman devils" and must be punished. You will find some of the paintings in the Carnegie Institute international exhibition of paintings reproduced in the Gravure Section.

A CHARMED LIFE! -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding

Economies come thick and fast
In this great Governmental drive,
And funds are hit on every side,
Though one seems destined to survive,

While others fall to right and left
One marches through the storm, unharmed;
Does it not seem miraculous
That one should bear a life so charmed?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Men Demand Them Beautiful

Cheeks are not so highly-colored as they were last season; but the fall tints in human hair are more fantastic and wonderful than ever.

* * *

If it weren't for the men and their childlike worship of beauty half the beauty specialists would go out of business within a week!

* * *

The high cost of beauty is what keeps half the men in this country riding in limousines and the other half with their noses to the grindstone.

Men are continually scoffing at the modern girl for the atrocities she commits against nature, via the rogue pot and the vanity case. But it is the MEN, not the women, who have turned beauty from a luxury into a necessity.

* * *

If you doubt it just offer to introduce one of them to a "fascinatingly homely" woman or to a girl with only charms of the mind and beauties of the soul.

* * *

No matter what color of hair God gave a woman she always yearns to change it.

* * *

To want to improve on nature by changing your personal color scheme is the most human instinct in the world! If you don't believe it you can go way back and ask the ancient savages who used to dye their hair a bright vermillion and paint their faces until they resembled a modern beach umbrella. Or, better still, you can step right out on the avenue any afternoon at tea time and ask some of the hundred or more modern ones who are gotten up like complete works of art.

To be born beautiful saves a woman not only a lot of heartaches, but a lot of money.

Think of a poor, hard-working girl cheerfully paying $2 for the latest shape in eyebrows, $40 for a hair-tint that will last only six or seven weeks, and $500 or $600 for a new face, complete, every year or so!

* * *

And that isn't all! If all the moans and tears of the women who have their faces peeled, starve themselves to skeletons and go through all the sacred rites could be collected they would make Niagara Falls sound like a whisper and look like a garden spray!

* * *

And all to be charming to some man who regards beauty as a "necessity," character as a luxury and brains as an affliction—in woman!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Purely personal piffle: I never hear a Swiss yodeler that I do not wish I could yodel, too. You know, surprise your friends! I have written forewords and introductions to 27 books. At the moment, Ghandi to my mind is the most important citizen of the world.

I'm always seeing a Chinaman I don't think will last until he gets home. I never knew an air tight grammarian who could write an interesting sentence. And precisionists who say "Between you and I" make me self conscious. I am one of three who knows a prominent man blondines his hair. It is fiery red, which he hates.

A tenth of my personal mail returns on account of faulty addresses. I once stood under a tree hit by lightning without a shock. A calf 20 feet away was killed. I was taught pool by Gil Patten, author of the Frank Merriwells. I often mistake Wellington Cross for Earl Benham, who do not look alike.

I once went to St. Louis to spend 24 hours and stayed seven weeks. Often, shaving, I wonder how it would feel to cut my throat. Premature gray hair came from fear of being fired on newspapers. With an extraordinary gift collection, I have carried but two canes in five years.

Every girl I know named Clare or Claire is remarkably beautiful. My favorite beauty of the moment is a hat check girl at the Waldorf. I like to walk through slums on hot nights. Current movie indifferences are for Clark Gable and Mitzi Green. My newest screen love is Madge Evans.

One of my favorite restaurants was Letan's, an obscure Hungarian place on Second avenue, now closed. A horror of hospitals keeps me from visiting sick friends. Nothing stirs my admiration like a sleight of hand trick. I'm that sort. The most colorful first night was the present "Scandals."

I love the smell of liquid shoe polish and invariably obey such signs as "Please have exact change ready." And look where the arrow points. All my life I've wanted to live over a store so I could hang out a window at night. My wife never rouged her cheeks.

* * *

I snitch dabs of perfumes in strange homes if no one is looking. Broadway is the world's most cheaply obvious street. My most touching letter was from the aged mother of 10 children, who said: "No one ever wrote me before." I like canned fruit better than fresh. No rendezvous touches the old Knickerbocker bar at 5 p. m. My favorite color scheme is gray collared shirts with deep purple ties. I'm afraid of men who wear caps on dark streets.

* * *

A friend once called at my hotel at 3 a. m. to tell me he was skipping to Europe with another's wife and $12,000, not his own. I persuaded him to return the money and wait. Later they were married and neither speaks to me. I do not enjoy smoking out doors and have a secret admiration for professional gamblers. But all I meet are dull witted. I think Lionel is the most talented of the Barrymores. Yet I would rather watch George M. Cohan in a bum play than all the Barrymores in a masterpiece.

* * *

I like to raise Pullman blinds at night to peek out. I was a waiter two nights at the Manhattan in Cincinnati. And solicited advertising for months on Broadway without an order. Whenever an auto just misses me I break out in a fluttery laugh. No literature teaches the Book of Proverbs for eloquence.

* * *

Don Clarke once phoned: "Listen Droopy Drawers, I'm quitting my newspaper job to write novels." I told him not to be a fool. And he has written five best sellers in a row. The most beautiful country place ever visited was W. R. Coe's on Long Island. I eat only fattening foods but weight has not changed in 10 years. Nobody plucks a banjo like Eddie Peabody. I invariably think of appendicitis when swallowing grape seeds. Few can live in New York 10 years and be satisfied elsewhere. My grandmother had a clock with an old man's face that stuck out his tongue with every tick.

* * *

I buy every new shaving cream I see and think the last is absolutely the best. Jack Benny and Chic Sale are the cleanest living actors I know. Every morning almost I vow I'll try to write something important today. But it is always as trifling as this.

LISTEN, WORLD -:- -:-

By Elsie Robinson

Remember that old saying—"A HALF A LOAF IS BETTER THAN NONE AT ALL"?

How do you feel about that saying? Do you believe it? Are you willing to accept half-loaves in life? Some people aren't. Children never are.

That's one certain quality of the child mind, it never wants to compromise. If little Jenny can't have the new pink dress on which she has set her heart, she'll sob that she doesn't want ANY dress. If young Sam can't go to college with a cut-down and a tux and fraternity rating, he'll vow that he doesn't want to go to college AT ALL.

Jenny, eventually, will accept a blue dress instead of a pink one. And Sam will consent to risk the campus without all the trimmings. But they aren't happy about it. They'll feel mad and cheated.

That's the way children are. That's a sign that they are still children . . with an exaggerated sense of the importance of their own desires . . . without perspective or experience.

And that's the way grown-up people with children's minds are. They, too, refuse to accept half-loaves. They want their own way, ALL their own way, or they won't play.

You've seen women like that. They set their hearts on something . . . something that it's hard to give them. You try to reason with them. You offer them something else in the place of the thing they want. No use! They want THAT CERTAIN THING and nothing else will do. Selfish? Of course it's selfish. And they know it's selfish—but they don't care. Nothing, save their own desire, matters to them. And they've found that, if they insist long enough on getting their own way, they'll probably get it.

BUT THEY CAN'T SEE THAT THEY WILL REALLY LOSE MORE THAN THEY WILL GAIN IF THEY DO GET THEIR OWN WAY . . . FOR THEY HAVE THE MINDS OF CHILDREN . . . THEY CANNOT SEE BEYOND THEIR OWN GREEDY NOSES.

You've seen men like that, too. Men who won't play unless they can run the show—men who won't accept half loaves . . . who pout and bluster and get mad if they are balked.

And, if you have had anything to do with insanity, you have seen many crazy people like that. For craziness is usually childishness, carried to dangerous and idiotic extremes. Crazy people never will accept half-loaves.

So your attitude toward half-loaves is really a very penetrating test of your maturity and sanity. If you WON'T accept them you're either kiddy or cuckoo.

For the truly grown-up person discovers one thing about life, if he discovers nothing else. HE DISCOVERS THERE ARE NO WHOLE LOAVES.

There are no perfect jobs, no perfect marriages, no perfect adventures, no perfect men and women. Everything and everybody is a Half Loaf. Everything that happens to you will be modified, qualified, limited and handicapped by the larger conditions outside your little personal experience.

If you can understand that fact . . . if you can be grateful for it and profit by this larger contact, even at the price of your dreams . . . then you're sitting pretty, stranger, and you'll get somewhere.

If you can't . . . if you insist on having your Whole Loaf or none at all . . . if you let every obstacle get your goat . . . then, that's just your bad luck and you are certainly in for a trimming. For Grown Up Cry Babies is something this old world has NO USE FOR.

Only Normal Trade Can Restore Prosperity

By Claude G. Bowers

Assuming that the plan of the big banks to take over the frozen assets of smaller banks of the country will save many institutions that otherwise would have to close their doors is all that is claimed for it, this cannot mean the restoration of prosperity. It may mean the prevention of a deeper slump into the depression. Nor has our trouble been the inability of businessmen to borrow money at the banks at reasonable interest to push their enterprises; the trouble has been there have been no enterprises to push. Prosperity depends on just one thing, and that is the restoration of normal trade. That is the life blood of prosperity.

There are several explanations for the slump of trade, and several things that government can do about it. One reason is that seven million breadwinners, who, with their dependents must amount to twenty million people, are either buying nothing at all, or very little. Take twenty million buyers out of the stores and business is in a bad way.

There can be no resumption of normal buying and, therefore, of prosperity, until these millions are back to work; and so long as they are out of work and the consumption demands of the country are thereby decreased, private industries are not going to increase their output. But government can put these men back to work through an enormous prosperity loan for public construction. The wages these men get will then be spent; the merchants' business will revive, and he will need more goods; the factories will have to speed up to supply the stores, and this will put men back into the factories.

But the Administration, apparently, is opposed to this program.

* * *

Our International Trade Wrecked

Our international trade has been wrecked by an uneconomic governmental policy. The prohibitive tariff walls have been our ruin. Other nations have taken aggresive steps to keep the products of our factories and farms from their markets. England is preparing to follow in the wake of Canada and France. Stanley Baldwin, heading the Tory party, is urging a protective tariff there to keep us from her markets, so that the English government will be in position to bargain with us for the resumption of trade between the two countries.

Practically all economists have agreed that this tariff is responsible for the loss of trade, and therefore of prosperity. Almost all leading financiers and business men who have studied the situation with an earnest desire to find a remedy, all concede that normal trade depends upon a down revision of the tariff act. Nine-tenths of the American press concedes the point.

But the Administration has attached itself to the Grundy act with the tenacity of a cockleburr to a cow's tail, and refuses even to consider a revision.

Why We Have Lost Foreign Markets

Another reason for the failure of our foreign trade is that so many of the countries, offering the most enormous markets for our products, are operating on the silver basis; and, for illustration, we only accept the Chinese silver dollar as worth 22 cents. Naturally, China cannot afford to trade with us; and practically all our exports to that land of teeming millions have fallen off to nothing. The same is true of India, with its many millions more.

And China is described as prosperous by Senator Pittman, who has just returned. He found peace and abundant prosperity, with no noticeable unemployment in Shanghai, Hongkong, Tientsin, Hankow or other cities. Money, Chinese money, was abundant, and there was much building and great activity in real estate; but Senator Pittman found American and British business men in China unable longer to do business with the Chinese. He explains our plight in China thus:

"There is no mystery as to why China has ceased to buy our meats, wheat, lumber, fruits, cotton, automobiles, and manufactured products. They can't afford to buy them. Our price is too high. But it will be contended that our price is lower than it was two years ago. That is true, as to us, and in our money, but it is not true as to the Chinaman. As far as he is concerned we have increased our price to him on our products two and a half times what he paid for them two years ago."

This, in other words means that we fix the selling price of our products in our money. The Chinaman, to buy, must obtain our money with which to buy; to obtain it, he buys our gold or gold exchange with his own money; and where two years ago it took two of his dollars to buy one of ours, it now takes four and a half dollars to buy one of ours.

And that cuts the throat of our trade with China.

Must Act to Restore Buying Power of Silver

Financiers and businessmen realize that something must be done to restore the normal price and purchasing power of silver if we are to continue to do business with silver-using countries—constituting hundreds of millions of consumers. No party politics is involved, nor is the gold standard in America involved. The United States Senate unanimously passed a resolution asking the President to secure an international conference solely for this purpose:

"Of having nations agree, if possible, to abandon or suspend the policy and practice of debasing or melting up silver coins and selling the bullion; and for the purpose of reaching an agreement between nations, if possible, as to the future uses and status of silver as money."

Every Republican and every Democrat in the Senate voted for that—and the President has done nothing.

Making Banks Strong Will Not Bring Prosperity

Making the banks safe and strong is desirable, but it will not restore prosperity; that can only come by making trade normal and healthy again, and that cannot come until government takes steps to remove the obstacles in the path of trade.

Trade cannot be restored until the 20,000,000 affected, directly or indirectly, by unemployment are made purchasers again; and that can be done by a prosperity loan to put these people to work.

It cannot be restored until the tariff barriers are lowered; and this can be done with the approval of economists, financiers, and the press if the President will withdraw his opposition.

And it cannot be restored until something is done that will make it possible for hundreds of millions of consumers in silver using countries to trade with us again; this can be attempted, at least, through an international conference.

It is well to help the bankers; but banks will not thrive unless business men make loans to extend their trade and production. It is well to help the railroads, perhaps; but the earnings of the roads depend on the restoration of normal trade.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Why not act natural when guests arrive at your home instead of stiff and formal?

One reason why formal calls have lost their popularity is that the following set of rules for conduct is irksome to the modern individual.

"Poise"—what a lot of bunk is presented under its name.

Some people have become impressed with the idea that good breeding cannot accompany a hearty, enthusiastic greeting of friends.

One must be cool and collected and extremely proper to meet what they term the degree of poise which indicates a person of culture and refinement.

Of course there is the over-effusive and hail-fellow-well-met-slap-you-on-the-back-"Howdy" sort, almost as unreal in truth and appearance as the formal person.

But there is a middle position which makes guests happy.

If it is not natural for you to be sedate and expressionless, don't be asinine enough to assume it.

Be yourself.

The person playing a part gives evidence of it, because there is no sincerity back of it.
